Dastardly Attempt to Disturb a Republican Meeting.

The Cry of Fire Raised in a Crowded Hall.

A Fatal Panic Stopped by Gen. O'Brien's Presence of Mind.

Continued Enthusiasm in the Ranks of the Republicans.

The Democrats Renounce Their Hopes of Carrying the State.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., March 10.—Investigations made today into the disturbance of the Republican meeting at Phenix Hall last night, show the following facts: The hall, which is on the third floor, and is approached by a narrow, steep staircase, was crowded, the galleries being wholly filled by ladies. In the room on the floor beneath, known as Granite Hall, a Democratic caucus was being held. After speaking for some time, Gen. O'BRIEN noticed near the rear of his audience several men he knew to be Democrats, from having been in their company driving in the afternoon, but he does not know the names of any of them. He had been reviewing the record of the Democratic Party during the war, and was speaking of them as Copperheads, when one of these men near the door cried out, "That's a —— lie, anyhow." Then these men, as if carrying out a prearranged programme, jumped over the backs of their seats, and, as they reached the door, raised a cry of fire, which was taken up instantly by a crowd in the street. There was instantly intense excitement in the hall, the whole audience jumping to their feet and rushing to the doors, of which there are but two, and both very narrow. The ladies in the galleries were especially panic-stricken, but Gen. O'BRIEN cried out at the top of his voice: "Ladies, there is no fire, and no danger if you keep your seats." The men struggling for the doors paused, and upon O'BRIEN repeating his words in more commanding tone, confidence was restored. People resumed their seats, and Gen. O'BRIEN went on with his address. The engines were called out by a cry of fire, and upon careful examination by the firemen, of the building and all adjacent edifices, it was found there was not the slightest foundation for the alarm which had been given. If Gen. O'BRIEN had not been able to check the panic, it was inevitable that many persons must have been crushed to death in the efforts of the mass of people to gain the street. These facts were not generally known until today, and great indignation is now expressed at the wanton outrage by which so many lives, especially of females, were put in jeopardy to serve partisan end. Measures have already been adopted to ferret out the miscreants who raised the alarm and bring them to justice.

The Democrats have almost entirely ceased to claim the State, and are preparing for a defeat by saying that the election of Mr. STEVENS is would tend to consolidate the Republican Party and leave no scrubrock for them to coalesce with. It is now said that this view has been so prevalent that no money has been sent from abroad to aid their cause. All the Democrats in the State, however, have not taken the same view, and it is said that a well-known prominent Democratic politician of Manchester called Mr. AUGUSTUS SCHELL, of New-York, out of the directors' room at the late meeting of the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad in Boston, and engaged him in earnest conversation. If it was money he was after there was no evidence that he got any, as, for the past few days, the Democratic canvass has been spiritless in most localities. On the other hand, the Republicans are everywhere on the alert and confident of victory. They all admit that if the State is not carried it will not be for want of effort. The contributions of money have been liberal, and the reports from all the towns show that the canvass, which sometimes are attended with some bitterness, have been much more harmonious than usual, and have left the party stronger than it was before.

Continued Enthusiasm in the Republican Ranks—Large and Demonstrative Meetings—Increased Prospects of Success.

From Our Special Correspondent.

CONCORD, N. H., Saturday, March 9.

The last working night but one of the canvass in New-Hampshire has been fully improved by the Republicans, large meetings having been held at all the important points, and there was an increased enthusiasm and confidence manifested everywhere, so far as reports have been received by the State Committees. At Portsmouth the meeting was addressed by Gen. WALTER HARRIMAN with his accustomed ability. He pictured the horrible condition of the country when the Republicans assumed the Government, when Democracy arose in armed rebellion. Seven years, he said, have now elapsed since the war-cloud disappeared, yet the spirit of rebellion still lives in Democratic utterances. When they proclaim the iniquities of the tariff, they but proclaim their own crimes, which have burdened the country with such a heavy taxation. He alluded to the latest manifestations of the Democracy in the Kuklux outrages South, which are apologized for by the Democracy of the North. He spoke very strongly in defense of the Administration of Gen. GRANT, claiming that no President had ever shown more capacity, ability and statesmanship; and he will, he said, be honored by the whole people long after his present slanderers are forgotten. Reduction of taxation, payment of the national debt, honesty and frugality in the management of the national finances, are GRANT's claims to popular confidence. In conclusion, Gen. HARRIMAN said there is nothing in the political situation to dishearten true Republicans. The elections of last year were all that could be asked, and on great questions of the day the heart of the people beats true. This contest will result in a Republican triumph just as sure as that of November will.

Gen. HARRIMAN has been one of the most effective speakers, and carried his audience with him to-night to an even greater extent than usual. He has been constantly engaged in the canvass, from the beginning and has visited nearly all the towns. During his labors he has talked personally with a majority of the Republicans in the State, and today informed me that he has not found a single one opposed to Gen. GRANT. There is among them only pity for SUMNER, and contempt for SCHURZ and other Republican conspirators against the President.

Hon. HORACE MAYNARD, of Tennessee, addressed a meeting at Bradford in a speech of an hour and a half in length, during which he showed to his hearers the folly of trusting in the promises of late repentance, now made by the Democratic party. The history of that party was briefly reviewed, with a view of showing that it was responsible for the rebellion, and the consequent load of debt upon the nation. In speaking of the charges against GRANT, he contrasted the honesty of his administration with the corruption and waste of that of BUCHANAN and other late Democratic Presidents, proving that the Government will never have frugally managed than at present. It therefore, he said, did not become the Democracy to charge corruption where none existed, while their own record was wholly indefensible. Like all the other speakers, Mr. MAYNARD devoted himself chiefly to national issues, and met them all squarely. He did not speak in defense of the Administration, because it needed none, and he was sure that New-Hampshire, as well as the country at large, was convinced that the Democracy could not be trusted, and would so decide. Its leaders, he massed its whole aggressive strength, he said, in the South, as before the war, where the minds of the people are yet filled with the virus that fermented the rebellion, and waged the gigantic war upon the Government.

Gen. JAMES R. OBERNE, of New-York, spoke in Concord to a large meeting composed of the best citizens. He sketched the devotion to country of the Republican Party during the war, as contrasted with the Copperheads of the North, who kept up a fire in the rear while their comrades were battling in front. Republican ranks. The consistency and purity of Republicanism since the war was forcibly presented and the charges against it of corruption thoroughly refuted.

Nominations for town officers and representatives were generally made today. The Democrats have taken much comfort from the supposed split in the Republican ranks in Concord, from the failure of Mayor JONES to secure a renomination, and have sought to encourage their hopes by circulating stories of dissatisfaction, but as a meeting to-night Mayor JONES announced that the decision of the majority would not prevent himself and all of his friends from giving a hearty support to the whole Republican ticket. In Concord, as everywhere in the State, there is an entire unity of purpose to achieve a signal victory. E. C.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, March 11—1 A. M.—The lowest barometer, which, on Saturday night, was over Georgian Bay, has probably moved down the St. Lawrence Valley. The area which was over Georgia has moved north-eastwardly over and beyond North Carolina, and rising barometer is now prevailing at the stations east of the Rocky Mountains, with westerly to northerly winds, and clear and clearing weather very generally except over the North-west, where cloudy weather, with light snow, continues. The barometer is highest from the lower Mississippi Valley to the upper lakes, and lowest over New-England.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will continue rising on Monday at the stations east of the Rocky Mountains, with westwardly to north-westwardly winds, falling temperature and clear and pleasant weather generally. Brisk, approaching high, westerly and north-westerly winds will probably extend during the night from Lake Ontario to the New-England coast. Dangerous winds are not anticipated for the Atlantic and Gulf coasts to-night, except on the western Gulf coast.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT.

Snow has been reported from Buffalo, N. Y., Cheyenne, Leavenworth, Keokuk, Marquette, Montreal, Canada, Mount Washington, and Omaha. A storm of sleet prevailed this morning at Portland, Me., where a light rain is now reported. Rain has fallen at Augusta, Ga., to the amount of 1.19 inches, and at Baltimore, Boston, and Charleston to the amount of 3.00 inches, and at Jacksonville, Fla., to the amount of 1.37 inches; also at Lynchburg, New-London, New-York, Norfolk, Philadelphia, Portland, Oregon, and Savannah, to the amount of 2.07 inches. Rain fell in this city from yesterday evening up to about 10½ o'clock this morning, when there was quite a fall of snow. It continued to rain afterward until shortly after 2 o'clock. Pleasant and warm weather now prevails at the stations on the Gulf and South Atlantic coasts.

IN NEW-YORK CITY.

A violent rain-storm covered our City yesterday till about 8 P. M., 1.4 inches falling in eighteen hours, a larger amount than in the past forty days. The thermometer registered at 1 A. M., 29°; 11 A. M., 50°; 3 P. M., 56°; 9 P. M., 39°. Barometer, 29.77, 29.92, 29.64, 29.60. Corresponding date last year: Thermometer, 31°, 50°, 60°, 34°. The indications are for lower temperature.

Captures of Stage Robbers.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10.—Yesterday the stage driver between Stockton and Jenny Lind saw a man in the chaparral whom he recognized as one of the recent stage robbers. An armed party pursued him, and a desperate fight ensued. The robber was shot three times, and was mortally wounded, and taken prisoner. He admits having been concerned in two recent stage robberies. He refuses to give his name.

Presentation to Capt. T. S. Currin, of the Sierra Gaosta.

Capt. T. S. CURRIN, for several years first mate of the Havana steam-ship Morro Castle, under Capt. ADAMS, has recently been promoted to the command of that vessel. The passengers who went with him on the trip from Havana when the ship encountered a storm of extraordinary severity and duration, have presented the Captain a fine gold chronometer watch, made by the United States Chronometer Company, and described, in recognition of the skillful manner in which he handled the Morro Castle on that trying occasion.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS.

Supplementary Report of the Civil Service Board—The Land Office—Taxes and Debt of New-York—Straw Bills—The Governor—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The Civil Service Advisory Board, which has continued its labors through good report and evil report, is now about ready to present a supplemental report to the President. The regulations for carrying into effect the principles laid down in the general rules adopted the 1st of January have all been decided upon and are embodied in the report about to be made. There has been some modification of the original rules made necessary by the limited machinery at the command of the Commission. For instance, there will be no examination of Postmasters, and there has been none, at least under the direction of the Board, so that nothing could be more absurd than the story Mr. LOGAN told last Friday about the examination of two applicants in his State. One thing is certain; even if the work of the Commission has been as useless as some claim, the members have done a great deal of honest labor upon the scheme, and those members who have done the work in addition to the duties of the regular positions they hold, by working over-hours, should have some compensation above their ordinary pay. It is expected that the report will be made public during the week. In the Senate to-morrow, Mr. TRUMBULL will make a speech in reply to the opposition that has thus far been made to the appropriation of $50,000, which is designed to help along the execution of the improved system. It seems probable that the Senate will vote the appropriation, but the vote will be close.

CLERICAL FORCE OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Though the Senate refused by a close vote to amend the Appropriation bill under consideration so as to authorize the employment of forty additional clerks for one year in the General Land Office, there is no doubt that when the separate bill for that purpose comes up it will be agreed to. A tabulated statement taken from the records of the office shows that in the year Commissioner DRUMMOND has had charge of the office 8,240 letters were written more than were written in the previous year. Comparing the same years, the increase in uncontested preemption cases, suspended for informality, dropped of was 2,564; in contested cases, 258. The aggregate number of monthly returns of land offices remaining unposted when Mr. DRUMMOND came into the office was 183. The number at the end of his first year was 334—a gain of 149. In other branches of the work there has been a like gain; but with the constant increase of current business it will be impossible to bring up that which is behind for years to come without additional force. The Commissioner reports the following back work now in the office, besides a large number of contested and suspended pre-emption cases and claims of various kinds; patents to be written and recorded on cases examined and approved, 9,767; Alphabetical index to patents issued from July 4, 1836, which has never received attention, 6,400 volumes, containing 3,300,000 patents. This instance of neglect is the most astonishing violation of law, and should be corrected at once, as the index is a necessity to the work of the office, and, if completed, would save a vast amount of work in consulting records. It cannot be made under the meagre force of clerks is provided. The bill to reorganize the clerical force is also of great importance, as it is designed to increase very greatly the efficiency of the service.

NEW-YORK WEALTH, TAXATION AND INDEBTEDNESS.

The census tables of wealth, taxation and public indebtedness, just completed, place the total assessed value of the real estate in the State of New-York at $1,822,930,097, and the assessed value of personal property $434,200,976. The true valuation of all real and personal estate in the State is given at $2,600,541,964. The total of taxation, exclusive of national, for the last year, was $48,328,627; divided as State, $8,720,156; county, $15,103,581, and town and city $24,504,891. The true valuation of real and personal estate in New-York County is fixed at $2,420,325,700. Or more than half that of the whole State. The six counties of Albany, Erie, Kings, New-York, Rensselaer and Westchester comprise almost three-fourths the wealth of the whole State, or in the aggregate, $4,708,372,850. Kings is given at $700,000,000. The other five range between $110,000,000 and $165,000,000 each.

POST-OFFICE STRAW BIDDERS.

The Post-office Committee of the House has closed its investigation of the Post-office contracts, and is now preparing the report. The action of the Postmaster-General will be sustained, and a bill will be reported to break up the practice of straw-bidding. Among its provisions is one requiring the bidder to take oath that he presents his bid in good faith, and that he intends and is able to carry out the contract if the award is made to him. He is also required to swear that his guarantors are responsible, and able to meet their obligations. Postmasters who certify to the guarantors will be punished for certifying in blank, or fraudulently, or carelessly. This is just the result which has been brought about by the investigation did not desire. The attention of Congress was first mainly directed to the subject by investigation. The sales of arms investigation by two Committees, the custom-house investigation by the Senate Committee, the Seneca Sandstone investigation by the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and the investigation of the District Board of Public Works, and one or two more, will all be going forward to-morrow. The investigation of the use of Seneca stone in the State Department building will be begun to-morrow, but the other investigations have all made more or less progress.

THE GUERRIERE COURT-MARTIAL.

The Guerriere, which has been for some time at the Norfolk Navy-yard, is now on her course to New-York. The finding of the court-martial which tried Capt. BENJAMIN FARRAGUT, for running aground upon a rock last Summer in the Mediterranean Sea is now before the Secretary of the Navy for review and will not be made public for some days.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR APPOINTMENT.

Senator MORTON has not yet returned from Indiana, though he is expected to-morrow. Mr. CONKLING's resolution regarding appointments will not be taken up till Mr. MORTON is in the Senate, the Senate, he is reported to have intimated to it. When it does come up there is a prospect for a bitter personal debate, Mr. TRUMBULL having given notice that he is ready for anything of that kind, as is also the Senator whose "heart never quails."

THE CENSUS REPORT.

The 12,000 copies of the population tables of the census report which have been ordered printed by Congress will probably be ready for distribution, in part at least, by the last of the present week or the first of next. The greater portion of the printing is already done, and the presses will be kept running on the remainder to-morrow.

STEAM-SHIP BUILDING MATERIALS.

The Senate Subcommittee on Commerce, composed of Messrs. KELLOGG, CORBETT and VICKERS, have finally agreed upon a bill, first allowing materials for the construction of steam-ships, by section or otherwise, to be entered free of duty, and allowing a drawback; second, ship supplies and coal to be withdrawn from bond duty free; third, American vessels registered in foreign countries allowed to register as American vessels within two years; fourth, steam-ships of foreign build, of not less than 1,000 tons, may be purchased, and be entitled to American registers; fifth, in case of war, all said ships may be used in the marine service by Government on appointment.

Sunday Crime and Consequences.

JOHN MCKENNIE and his wife MARY quarreled yesterday afternoon at their residence, No. 20 Washington-street, and during the affray he struck her on the head with an ax, inflicting a slight scalp wound, which was dressed by Dr. HUTCHINSON. JOHN was arrested and locked up in the Church-street Police Station.

An altercation took place last evening in a house of low repute, occupied by colored people, at No. 64 Bond-street, between two colored men named Christopher Fisher, of Wooster-street, and Seventeen-street, and JOHN CONNOR, of No. 30 Thompson-street, about the payment for some drinks which they had been drinking. During the affray which followed, FARRAR shot FISCH in the left hip, inflicting a slight flesh wound, and FISCH cut FARRAR across the face with a knife, inflicting a severe cut, and locked up in the Eighth Precinct Station-house, neither being seriously injured.

A fight occurred yesterday morning in the lager beer saloon, No. 344 East Twenty-third-street, between JOHN MULLIGAN, of No. 14 West Twenty-fourth-street, and JOHN MULLIN, of No. 341 West Twenty-fourth-street, during which MULLIGAN struck MULLIN on the head with a beer-jug, inflicting a dangerous wound. MULLIN was sent to Bellevue Hospital, and MULLIGAN is held to await the result of his injured.

Yesterday morning ALBERTO GRAY, in the Grand Jury room, Tombs, charged JOHN WHITEHOUSE, keeper one of the watchers, named MATTHEW LYNCH and EDWARD R. MANN, a dry goods clerk residing at No. 303 East Fifteenth-street, about the payment of some drinks. The quarrel ensued, and WHITEHOUSE, MANN pulled out a revolver and fired two shots at LYNCH. He, however, missed the object of his aim, but one of the balls lodged in the arm of a by-stander named EDWARD SMITH, of No. 206 East Forty-sixth-street, inflicting a severe wound. The injured man was properly cared for, and the assailants conveyed to the Fifty-ninth-street Police Station.

MARGARET BROWN, aged twenty-seven, residing alone at No. 128 East Thirteenth-street, while drunk yesterday morning, fell down a flight of stairs with her baby, four months old, in her arms. The child is supposed to be fatally injured, and both were taken to Bellevue Hospital.

ANDREW FRANCY, aged thirty-six, French, was found sick, yesterday morning, at the corner of Greenwich and Vandam streets, but died before he could be removed to the hospital. The body was taken to the Morgue.

MARY LUMPE, of No. 34 Sullivan-street, yesterday afternoon attempted suicide by leaping overboard from Pier No. 45 North River. She was rescued and locked up in the Greenwich-street Police Station, where she stated that her husband, who had been an invalid for several years, had turned her out of the house without cause.

JOHANNA QUINN, aged fifty, of No. 198 Avenue B, was, yesterday afternoon, knocked down by a coach and horses, at the corner of Avenue B and Twelfth-street, and severely injured. The driver, JOHN VAHNETT, of No. 178 Avenue B, was arrested, but Mr. QUINN refusing to make a complaint, he was discharged.

WALTER H. OSCOOD, aged forty-five, was found dead in bed at No. 43 East Ninth-street, yesterday afternoon, from some unknown cause.

JULIA COURTLE, of No. 1,008 Third-avenue, aged seventeen, was found dead in her bed last evening.

UTAH.

The Suits Against Mormons not to be Abandoned—Congressional Action on Polygamy Spoken of.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Chief-Justice MCKEAN, of Utah, is still in Washington on business connected with the judiciary of that Territory, and has had several interviews with the President and Attorney-General WILLIAMS. There is no probability whatever that the criminal suits already commenced and pending will be abandoned. A measure will soon be introduced in Congress supplying the necessary pecuniary means to meet the expenses of the prosecutions. Some of the members of Congress are considering the subject of a supplemental anti-polygamy bill in order to obviate present difficulties. The act cannot be enforced owing to the secrecy with which the polygamous marriages are consummated. A remedy is suggested by making proof of cohabitation, or acknowledgment of the same, sufficient to sustain the indictment.

Mormon Nominations for the State Candidates—No Gentile Ticket to be Nominated.

SALT LAKE CITY, March 10.—In the Mormon Nominating Convention, last night, FRANK FULLER, Ex-Secretary of the Territory, was nominated for Representative in Congress; HEMPSTED, the Attorney for BRIGHAM YOUNG, for State Senator; Col. AMES and Ex-Secretary MAHS for members of the Legislature as representing the Gentiles, who, however, do not recognize them. The Mormon Legislature of the State, if admitted, will probably give HOOPER and PITCH the United States Senatorships. The Apostle CANNON will take a State Senatorship. It is doubtful whether the Gentiles will nominate a ticket or attend the election. They trust to Congress to defeat the whole scheme.

Wife and Child Murder.

DAYTON, Ohio, March 10.—A horrible murder was committed six miles north-east of the city last night. MARY MARGUARDT, aged about thirty-five, and three children, aged respectively six and eight years and six months, are supposed to have been killed by the husband, LEONARD MARGUARDT, who is now in jail. The woman was apparently strangled. The two elder children were found on the bank of a creek some distance from the house, drowned, and the infant head was smashed. The facts will be elicited at the inquest on Monday.

A Hymn to Carl.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

Democratic admiration for Hon. CARL SCHURZ has transcended the narrow confines of prose, and now demands the illimitable possibilities of verse for anything like its expression. We have predicted this thing all along. We knew the language of plain prose would soon be exhausted, and that the eulogist must upon blend with the laureate, or the subject would fail of justice. CARL must be given in majestic rhyme, or not at all. Syntax had done its best, and unless prosody could help the matter along the subject had better be veiled, as the painter veiled the father's face to express that higher and deeper grief which is paternal, after he had exhausted his resources on the milder forms of sorrow depicted on the brother and sisters. Unless the lately heavy critics, or the more lively ditkyrambic, with a flute accompaniment, can voice the Democrat heart as it contemplates the Missouri Senator, there must be a trece to attempted panegyric and an agreement to let expressive silence must his praise. But we are glad to find that at least one gentleman has the boldness for the required effort, and is willing to make a grand struggle to give melodious syllable to his emotions—which may be said to be those of admiration not unmixed with awe. We allude to Mr. JEROME B. SULLIVAN, the Washington correspondent of the New-York World, who, in a postscript to CARL SCHURZ we reproduce from the columns of that journal entire, because its linked sweetness is not too long drawn out. It is as follows:

E. CARL SCHURZ.

Sword of the truth—Foil to the sword of Power;
Poised to cast; Reaper to fraud and guile;
How brightly gleams thy tempered steel, the white
Blade of the Sunset, Sunset of the Right!
Prostrate and weaponless! The cause, the hour
Demand thee more and more, thou shield and Spear
Of Liberty! Thrust hard, nor ever fear
The issue of this conflict for the lover
Left us by Fathers, who never sold the Flag.
Now mean the Eagle for a bird of prey
Upon the States. Thou art the Sentinel may,
But for thy strokes, revive—let them not lag.
Already thou hast slept into the brink
Of his false purpose. Smite, oh, smite again.

It would perhaps be unfair to apply the crucial test of imparcial criticism to the above. Enchanting, as it does, from all measures of the heart, rather than the intellectual, of the intellect, it ought to be exempt from the critic's aqua fortis. Else we might inquire how a man, even of Mr. SCHURZ's protean capabilities, can be a sword and a foil, a pennard and a rapier, not to mention a shield and a spear, all at once; also, whether it can be considered the fair thing in chivalry to bring all these weapons to bear at one and the same time upon an "oppressor" who is "prostrate and weaponless." Likewise, whether it is according to the code to "cleft" the "brain of his false purpose."

But waiving all these objections of minor detail, it will wounds our pride to see a Missouri Senator immortalized in this way from home. The cultivation of home industry being one of the cardinal points of our political faith, we referred the product of Mr. SYLLIBOW's muse to the poet of the Democratic office, with instructions to evolve something of the kind for our columns, or consider himself discharged. Being a man of family, and a spendthrift so the full extent of his means, he was impelled to do his best, and soon returned with the following, which we submit without comment:

CARL SCHURZ.

Scalping-knife of virtue; Tomahawk of truth;
Blunderbuss to cant; Howitzer to fraud;
Double-barreled shot-gun of the people's rights!
Hitting the bull's eye every time!
When thou takest aim! In fear they squeal
And run, as if the imp of Darkness did pursue them!
And in their trepidation they do rear
Upon their hind legs, lest Carl Schurz
Go at! He stands erect, with a brass-mounted
Battery in each hand, and bore-tipped
Arkansas tooth-pick in the other.
Ever ready! Ever true!
And when they come, he reaches for them!
Gives them the full four fingers of buck-shot,
And then reloads for the next blizzard.
Keep on, oh Carl, keep on! Hit 'em again,
And they invite with strength to rise
Thick as worlds on sky head.
Let not the eagle to with brick-bats hurt,
And more the pennon-eared bird—from harm.
Thou art the Sentinel of the Right!
Rush 'em, oh Carl! 'em hits continual!

[The Arkansas tooth-pick was a Confederate weapon in the late war—a rusty knife about two feet long. The metaphor in which our poet sees it is borrowed from that of a member of the Irish Parliament, who described a man fighting with a sword in each hand and a pistol in the other.—Ed. Dem.]

ALEXIS.

The Grand Duke in Havana—His Arrival and Reception—An Interesting Review—Wonderful Enthusiasm of the Visitors—Relaxing in the United States.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, March 9, 1872.

Home affairs of every kind have been forgotten during the past week by the excitement-loving Havanese, the presence of the Grand Duke ALEXIS having for the time absorbed all other matters. After the receipt of the telegram announcing the Duke's departure, preparations began in earnest, and as everything here is done in a slovenly way, things were still in a state of painful uncertainty after the Prince had come ashore. But I am anticipating. The telegram to Mr. HIRSCHL, the Russian Consul, gave Wednesday as the probable day of arrival, but on Tuesday, shortly before noon, the Russian fleet was sighted from the Morro Castle, and at noon the booming of the guns and the movement of the Havanese toward the wharf announced the fact of the Prince's arrival. Every man-of-war and fort saluted, and the expense of the salute is reckoned at $9,000. The Segundo Cabo, Gen. CEBALLOS, went on board of the Svetlana immediately, to receive the orders of his Highness and to offer him the hospitality of the island. A committee from the Board of Aldermen tendered the hospitalities of the City. The Prince received the Commissioners in a very friendly manner, and informed them that he would land on the following afternoon, as he was on that day on guard. He then gave the Board of Aldermen a chance to hang the mirrors borrowed from the Tacon Theatre in the saloons of the palace, and also to exhibit the lamps borrowed from the gas fitter for a week; while LACHAUME, the gardener, converted the dry and bad-looking palace-yard into a garden.

THE VISITOR ASHORE.

On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, the firing of cannon announced that the Duke was then landing at the Caballeria wharf. The state coach, finely decorated, was stationed near the wharf, drawn by six horses, of which two belonged to the Captain-General, and three to the Marquis of ALMENDARES, while the sixth I believe was hired from a livery-stable. The coachman, his wig and uniform, and the footman were also borrowed from the Marquis of ALMENDARES, but nobody could have told the difference between those borrowed articles and any others. The Volunteers and other troops were drawn up in single file, and one guarded both sides of the route of the procession.

THE PROCESSION.

Several of VALMASEDA's aids and staff officers accompanied the Russian officers in carriages, opening the line of march; after them came the other dignitaries of the island and of the Russian fleet, whose names are too familiar in New-York to require repetition. VALMASEDA gave his hand to ALEXIS on the landing steps, and then entered the carriage which I described above. VALMASEDA uncovered and the Prince saluted the assembled multitude. No cheering was heard. The procession closed with the carriage of the Aldermen and Consuls. The English and French Consuls agreed not to take part in the procession, it being against etiquette, the other Consuls being simply merchants here. The French acting Consul was won over to participate, at the last hour, in the procession of dignitaries and swaggerers, because both classes were represented. The action of the French Consul is commented upon, and the English Consul upheld the characteristic reputation of firmness for which his countrymen are famous; and when Prince ALEXIS heard of the occurrence, he remarked: "I like a man of honor, and with an independent spirit; please introduce me to the Consul." About an hour went by before the procession reached the quarters prepared for the Duke and his suite, and on arrival there ALEXIS insisted that VALMASEDA and some others should dine with him, which they did. The party broke up near 10 o'clock, and the moment VALMASEDA left, ALEXIS got a hold of a big cigar and requested to be driven about incognito. It was near 2 in the morning when ALEXIS returned, and at 12 o'clock noon he was met by your correspondent lounging in the Parque de Rodas, seated by one of VALMASEDA's aids.

AN INTERVIEW.

Your correspondent was introduced, and ALEXIS was unexpectedly interviewed by a New-York journalist, a record he supposed he had got rid of after leaving Uncle Sam's dominions. The following conversation took place:

CORRESPONDENT—Your Highness must be tired after driving about several hours, and then sitting at table several more.

ALEXIS—Not at all; I am used to that, and have a strong constitution. If I had not had one, my sojourn in the United States would have qualified me fully for all such work. This balmy air alone is sufficient to make any man feel constituted, and I wish I could take a piece of Cuba and fix air to St. Petersburg, although the countries very much alike in some respects, mosquitoes abounding in both places.

CORRESPONDENT—You don't like mosquitoes then?

ALEXIS—No, not a bit; and I don't know of a more dangerous animal. What building is that down there?

CORRESPONDENT—That is the Tacon Theatre, and the large building you saw on entering the port is the jail and penitentiary.

ALEXIS—I thought it was the palace, but ought to have known better, as rogues generally live in the largest houses.

CORRESPONDENT—Have you fine jails in Russia?

ALEXIS (laughing)—That's the first time I've been asked this question since I left Home; people asked about everything relating to my country, my family and myself, but they never said jail or misery once.

CORRESPONDENT—Perhaps they took it for granted that you must have rogues and jails. All the houses here must look like jails to you, with their iron railings.

ALEXIS—They do not, because I have been in Spain and seen similar houses. How delicious the air is. If I had a hammock I would like to sleep here.

CORRESPONDENT—The air in New-York would not make you feel so at this season of the year. Would you object to telling me how you liked your trip and sojourn in the United States?

ALEXIS—If I had anything unpleasant to say, I should remain silent, and not answer that question, but I say it was to pleasant, and the people were so kind, that I can only regret that I could not remain longer, and if I did not have my path in life laid out for me, I should like to live in America altogether, dividing my time from May to January between New-York and the prairies, and spending the remainder in New-Orleans. I may go back there if I can.

CORRESPONDENT—Did you read the reports published about your father having ordered you to return home during the affair of your late Minister?

ALEXIS—Let us drop that; the story is too ridiculous for any one to pay a person to believe or to speak about. And I think I'll light another cigar and see what my young friends over there are laughing about.

On walking over, the joke was discovered to consist in a young Cuban, as aid of VALMASEDA, trying to pronounce some Russian words and finding them somewhat difficult.

AFTER INCIDENTS.

On Thursday the Duke remained at the Quinta de Santovenia until the afternoon, when he assisted at the official dinner given at the Palace by VALMASEDA. After dinner he visited the opera, arriving in time to hear the last act of "Crispino," and to applaud Signors BALFE and Signora BARI. Yesterday he went to inspect the Canal de Vento, which is to supply the city with water toward the beginning of next year. Today he remained on board during the forenoon, and a solemn Te Deum was sung to celebrate the advent of his ancestor to the throne seventeen years ago. To-morrow the city ball will take place at the Palace, the Marquis of AGUAS CLARAS being the managing artist of the decoration. QUASIMODO.

The Sentiments of Gov. Davis, of Texas—Great Democratic Consternation.

From the Houston Telegraph, Feb. 29.

We do not believe that Gov. DAVIS ever for a moment thought of getting rid of a bill of the indictment against him, and we are sorry that any paper has ever published such a report. When all the world sees that Radical papers dare hold upon such a charge to make capital out of it, the impolicy of making it is evident. We do not believe that Gov. DAVIS fears the result of the indictment, but are decidedly of the opinion that he is glad that it was found. We remember how strong was the great majority of Irving CLARK a certificate of election, but we would as soon expect to see the moon changed literally into a green cheese as to expect a conviction upon it.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

It is often dangerous for the literary hero of the day to show himself in the flesh to his worshipers. Very rarely does the man fulfill the expectations that have been raised by the author. There is no greater mistake than that often made that men must be what they write; that pages filled with tenderness and sentiment are the outpourings of a soul warm, generous and delicate; that the satirist of pretension and affectation must himself be a simple-mannered gentleman; that he who makes philanthropy a profession is an unselfish lover of his neighbor; that the humorist must be an amusing companion; that the poet's lips drop jewels, unpolished it may be, in his daily talk, and that he lives, or looks as if he lived, upon Parnassus. The sentimental writer is often at heart a coarse creature; the social satirist, a vulgar snob; the professed philanthropist, a hard self-seeking politician; the humorist, a dull dog; and the poet, a very prosaic person, whose daily life is in the world of common place, or at least of common sense. It is not always, indeed, that popular literary idols disenchant those of their worshippers who come too near to them; but CHARLES DICKENS is one of the idols who will not bear close examination. Those who saw him at his first visit to this country remember him as a lively and amusing but flashy and very conceited person; and on his second visit his appearance and bearing showed that twenty years of literary distinction and of the association and personal and social culture which such eminence is supposed to bring, had done little or nothing to mellow, to humble, or to refine him. Whatever his intellectual growth and culture, he remained personally on the level where he was born and bred. He lacked both simplicity and polish. And in the family derangements of some years previous, which were unfortunately made public, he had offended the taste of all men of true delicacy and sense of honor. No man, it is said, is a hero to his valet de chambre; of which assumed truth it has also been said, and well said, the fault is quite as much in the valet as in the master; the difficulty being that the former is unable to appreciate the latter. But the book before us is a proof that there are notable exceptions to this general dictum. Mr. FORSTER seems to have played admiring "wally-de-sham" to Mr. DICKENS in his life, and not to be tired of the part now that the death of the great literary caricaturist has thrown him out of his situation. Or rather, he prolongs his tenure of office, "holds over," as our politicians say, although he is really displaced.

Mr. FORSTER's book is, thus far, a very disappointing one, no less in the literary skill with which it is put together than in the subject which it presents to us. The biographer seems to have endeavored to imitate BOSWELL in the minuteness with which he follows his author into the most trivial details of his daily life, and, at the same time, to do what BOSWELL took no thought of—to glorify himself, and to produce a work of intrinsic literary merit. The consequence is that, between the two stools, he is fat upon the ground. We do not mean, of course, that the book is without interest. It is impossible that the story of the life of such a man as CHARLES DICKENS should be told with even a moderate degree of skill, and fail to arouse the attention of intelligent readers, or even to give them a certain degree of pleasure. What we do mean is, that Mr. FORSTER has succeeded neither in giving a vivid and minute picture of his subject, nor in writing a rich and thoughtful book of the kind, for instance, of CARLYLE's Life of John Sterling; we do not insist upon an equal degree of merit.

Perhaps the best part of this volume is the first; that which describes the childhood of its subject. And this is done chiefly by DICKENS himself in the fragment of an autobiography which he left behind him, and in David Copperfield, the hero of which, as its author let the world know pretty well before he died, was himself. From these Mr. FORSTER quotes freely. The childhood is represented as a very sad one. Doubtless it was so, and DICKENS used all his literary power in portraying its dreary hopelessness, its sadness and its gloom. His father was in a debtor's prison, the rest of the family lived with him, and CHARLES, a morbidly sensitive and self-contained boy of tender years, passed his days in a blacking factory, pasting labels on the bottles, and his evenings and nights in such wretched lodgings as were afforded by an old woman who lived by taking in such little urchins as he. But he did not board with her; he fed himself on his pay of six shillings a week. He says that he was careful not to "anticipate his money," but to make it last the week through by putting it away in a drawer, wrapped in six little parcels, each containing the same amount and labeled with a different day. He seems always to have been honorable and prudent in money matters, and this little picture of his method and foresight and self-restraint is very creditable to him, and touching. And yet there is some difficulty in understanding the description he gives of his life at this time. He says: "I know that I have lounged about the streets insufficiently and unsatisfactorily fed. I know that but for the mercy of God I might easily have been, for any care that was taken of me, a little robber or a little vagabond." Neglected and forlorn he seems certainly to have been, and it needs no words of his to awaken sympathy for such a deserted little creature. But why he should have suffered from privation it is not easy to see. His lodging was paid for, and his clothes, by his father, as he tells us, and the six shillings went entirely to paying for his food. Six shillings, sterling, represents about a dollar and a half in gold, but in value at least twice that; and, indeed, we are sure that we are within bounds in saying that six shillings sterling had, in London fifty years ago, (the time in question) the purchasing power of at least five dollars in currency in New-York now. And what boy, prudent and precise in his expenditure, as DICKENS represents himself, lodged and clothed by his parents, need go about in New-York insufficiently fed on five dollars a week, and likely to become a vagabond and a robber? There have been men who have had for years not more than half that sum to buy food with, and who have neither starved nor run great risk of becoming robbers or vagabonds. But the condition of the child was sad enough. He spent his Sundays in the Marshalsea Prison with his shabby father, his shabby mother, and his shabby sisters. The effect of such a life must have been to the last degree depressing and deplorable. It was enough to ruin any nature not unusually sound and elastic, and we read of it with hearts sore and resentful for the sake of the boy who was to do so much in his manhood to delight the world.

But there is another revelation in this story of Mr. DICKENS' boyish life that is even more deplorable, which is even shameful. It touches not the lot of the boy, but the nature of the man. For it appears that in after years DICKENS grounded on his family feeling for point. Mr. Micawber is a faithful portrait of his father. Years after his early Irish experience, in the maturity of his manhood and the full flush of his genius, he held up his own father to the contempt and ridicule of the world in that pitiful and amusing caricature. He put into the mouth of his puppet the very words that were spoken by his father. That a man should do such an act in secret, intending always to preserve the secrecy, is amazing and revolting. But DICKENS himself tells the whole world of it. He wrote it down, knowing that it must be, at some time, published far and wide. That he should remember the sadness of this part of his life, that he should see the weakness, the culpable weakness of his improvident, shiftless father, and mourn it, avoid it himself, and wish to teach others to avoid it, is only natural and right. But that he should draw the portrait and caricature it, dwelling on the exaggeration of the repulsive features, making deliberate fun of it with the purpose of holding it up before the world as food for laughter, and as the means of putting money into his own pocket, is one of the saddest and most shameful acts recorded in biographical literature. This, however, was not enough. He must write underneath his shabby, ridiculous figure, "This is my father. Witness my hand, CHARLES DICKENS." What more abominable and hideous household treachery was ever done? The man who did that wrote himself down to after ages as the Ham of literature. And this was not enough. A quarrel between his father and the kinsman who owned the blacking factory having caused his discharge, his mother set herself about to accommodate the matter, and did so in one day, bringing back a request for his return and a testimonial of good character. His father, with an unwonted outbreak of spirit, said that he should not return, but should go to school. But his mother thought otherwise; and he writes, "I never afterward forgot, I never shall forget, I never can forget, that my mother was warm for my being sent back." He says that he does not write this resentfully or angrily. But why is he not angry or resentful? Because of any tenderness for her who bore him and nursed him; or if he had not that feeling, or she had forfeited it (if a mother can incur such forfeiture) was it because of any respect for the memory of his father's wife? No—it was because, he says, "I know how all these things have worked together to make me what I am." After that can we wonder that CHARLES DICKENS never drew a gentleman? Must we not rather wonder that he could draw even a good caricature of an honest, true-souled, tender-hearted man? For as to him, himself, must not the only semblance of an excuse that we can make for him be that he, poor creature, was born tainted in nature, a snob in grain? Setting aside the question of natural affection and filial reverence, he had not enough of the feeling of a gentleman to hide the shame of his own parents, not even enough to hide his own shame in revealing theirs.

The incidents of DICKENS' life up to the point at which the close of this volume leaves him—the year 1845—were not of any peculiar interest or significance. He lived the life of a sharp, hard-working newspaper reporter, and afterward that of a successful hard-working writer of serial stories. The record of his experience is simply that of the doing of his work, the production of his books, his agreements and his disagreements with his publishers, his letters to his friends, and his visit to America. A great deal of this is commonplace enough to have been excluded from a biography, except for the mere purpose of making one that would fill four volumes. The letters and talks about his business arrangements are of no value whatever, and may well be skipped. It is a great mistake to suppose that the haggling of publishers with authors and of authors with publishers has, in itself, any special interest—any more than any other haggling. To give it a claim upon the attention of the world, it must have some peculiar character; it must reveal, either on the one side or the other, original traits of mind or manner; it must be amusing or instructive in itself. Now what we are shown of DICKENS in this relation is remarkable for its insignificance. It might as well refer to Lord Verisopht turned author, as to CHARLES DICKENS. And it is worthy of special notice that there is nothing told us of what DICKENS said, or of his acts, of his daily life, or his relations with other men, that is of any interest, except for the fact that it refers to him. It has no special character of its own. He says nothing, does nothing that might not have been said and done by any other man under the same circumstances. It is only when he writes that he claims our attention. And even when he writes, whether in a letter or in a book, it is not in him, but in what was outside of him, in what he saw, and described as with more or less humor, that we are interested. He sees the outsides of things with a perception wonderfully quick and keen, and he reproduces the image left on his mind's eye with a vividness which is like the flashing of light, and generally in a style that produces a laugh. But he never seems to see the significance of things; he never gets below the surface. This is shown in the extracts from his letters on his first visit to America. He sees certain good-natured and well-bred people, (whom he easily forgets, as it proves;) certain other people who are bores, (these he tries to forget, but cannot,) and certain others who are grotesque. The last he vividly remembers, and tells us all about in a very amusing way. But as to the structure of society here, the why and the wherefore of it, the political condition and constitution of the country, he knows nothing, apparently sees nothing. He does not seem to know what anything means; not even to try to know. He gives no evidence of thought or even of inquiry. Things have outsides, and those outsides affect him thus and so. He sees and feels; nothing more.

To this peculiarity of his mind may be attributed his conceit, which is constantly showing itself, and his inability to appreciate much that is great in literature or art. What wonder that such a man should fail to like and to understand SHAKESPEARE, and should call Hamlet "a prosy chap," saying that "no audience could stand his dreary soliloquies unless they knew them by heart!" He could not see that to people who knew the soliloquies by heart, they would certainly be wearisome on repetition, were it not for a transcendent merit, a perennial beauty. But for him, the elevated and the profound were equally unattractive; to him, indeed, they seem to have been almost unknown. We see now how it was that he never presented us a high type of character, or one really true. He portrayed good people, and people that for the moment seem to live. But even these are, after all, monstrous exaggerations, and impossible creatures; stuming human beings with one trait of character, and one trick of manner and of speech; having the outsides of men and women, but the rudiments or portions of a ground-worm or a jelly-fish. A dual human being, in which one side is entirely organized, the other a blank.

He seems to have showed himself, except perhaps in the preface of his works, The Tale of Two Cities, to create a high type of character, or even a true one, he was nevertheless a man of marvelous and of charming power. He was in fact a great literary caricaturist. He was that and nothing more; but he was the greatest of his kind. His humor was inexhaustible; and it was a humor that touched and mollified high and low, old and young, the learned and the ignorant, the gifted and the dull. His sentiment is generally the poorest possible stuff; his pathos and his ladies ridiculous, and fanny; but the humor of his grotesque characters is inimitable. To be sure they are impossible in the nature of things, but they are not therefore the less amusing. There was never a more impossible creature than Sam Weller, except perhaps Mr. Bumble, or Mr. Winkle, or Dick Swiveller, or the little Marchioness, or Pecksnif, or—where shall we stop? But there never were personages, on or off the stage, who were so penetrated with humor. Humor is the soul of their grotesque bodies.

But we are not writing a criticism upon DICKENS as an author. It is as a man that he now claims our attention; and yet when we come to the task we find that there was little of him but the writer. Mr. FORSTER tries to present him to us, but he fails, except in regard to his boy life, and there, as we have said, he had DICKENS' own help. He tries to make some show of the man by even reprinting notes that DICKENS wrote to him asking him to take luncheon, and to ride. They do not present either a very agreeable or a very vivid picture of the man. For instance: "Where shall it be—oh where—Hampstead, Greenwich, Windsor? WHERE?????? While the day is bright, not when it has dwindled down to nothing! For who can be of any use whatsomedever such a day as this, excepting out of doors." This is pretty poor fooling; and there is too much of such stuff repeated on Mr. FORSTER's pages. He has monstered his author's nothings with a vengeance. If DICKENS wrote such silly, vulgar stuff as that, even in asking a friend to ride, that friend would have shown his discretion by hiding it away and saying nothing about it. The volume ends, as we have remarked, with Mr. DICKENS' first visit to this country; and we shall close our notice of it by quoting the following passage showing his real appreciation of the people among whom he had been three months:

"I said I wouldn't write anything more concerning the American people for two months. Second thoughts are best. I shall not change, and may as well speak out—to you. They are friendly, earnest, hospitable, kind, frank, very often accomplished, far less prejudiced than you would suppose, warm-hearted, fervent, and enthusiastic. They are chivalrous in their universal politeness to women, courteous, obliging, disinterested; and, when they conceive a perfect affection for a man, (as I may venture to say of myself,) entirely devoted to him. I have received thousands of people of all ranks and grades, and have never once been asked an offensive or impolite question—except by Englishmen, who, when they have been 'located' here for some years, are worse than the devil in his blackest painting. The State is a parent to its people; has a parental care and watch over all poor children, women laboring of child, sick persons, and captives. The common men render you assistance in the streets, and would revolt from the offer of a piece of money. The desire to oblige is universal; and I have never once traveled in a public conveyance without making some generous acquaintance whom I have been sorry to part from, and who has in many cases come an miles to see us again. But I don't like the country. I would not live here, on any consideration. It goes against the grain with me. It would with you. I think it impossible, utterly impossible, for any Englishman to live here and be happy. I have a confidence that I must be right, because I have everything, God knows, to lead me to the opposite conclusion; and yet I cannot resist coming to this one. As to the causes, they are too many to enter upon here."

And those were the very people whom he afterward so pitilessly and monstrously caricatured in the American Notes and in Martin Chuzzlewit. We await Mr. FORSTER's coming volumes in the hope that his story may improve as it goes on, both in manner and in matter.

Mr. Weed's Recollections.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of Friday you copy a letter of Mr. THURLOW WEED to the Chenango Telegraph, in which appears the following statement:

"I was then much attached to the boy RANDALL, (Hon. SAMUEL S. RANDALL, of this City,) who, some twenty years after ward it was my privilege and pleasure to suggest as State Superintendent of Common Schools, to which office he was elected with great unanimity by the Legislature, and in which he served usefully and honorably until he was superseded by Mr. RICE, through the influence of the organization, called 'Know-nothings.' The secret was so well kept that up to the hour that Mr. RICE received a legislative caucus nomination, it was not known that there would be any candidate opposed to Mr. RANDALL. The same Mr. RICE, years afterward, became the financial manager of the recently exploded 'Guardian Savings Bank!'"

Mr. WEED's memory has unfortunately served him ill in a matter where inaccuracy is likely to do injustice. Mr. RANDALL deserves all the praise which he gives, as our own citizens have for so many years had opportunity to know. But he was never State Superintendent of Common Schools, however suitable for the place. The facts are these:

In 1854, the Whigs having obtained control of the Legislature, a proposition was carried into effect which leading educators had urged—to separate the office of Superintendent of Common Schools from that of Secretary of State. Gen. E. S. ELDRIDGE, of Syracuse, had just been elected to the office, and Mr. RANDALL held a deputyship under him. Accordingly, a bill was prepared and enacted creating a Department of Public Instruction, and providing for a Superintendent to be elected by a convention of the two Houses of the Legislature. The bill passed, and the Evening Journal, which Mr. WEED then conducted, announced Mr. RANDALL as the proper incumbent.

But many educators of the State desired that VICTOR M. RICE, of Buffalo, then President of the State Teachers' Association, should be selected. Mr. RICE had been the City Superintendent of Schools in Buffalo, but was defeated a short time before. Hon. WALTER L. SESSIONS, a friend of Mr. RICE from boyhood, was in the Assembly, and ready to engage in helping him. The work preliminary to success was done secretly; THURLOW WEED was no man to be openly opposed. Among the members of the Legislature sitting him were Joseph W. Savage, James M. Boyd, Dewitt C. Littlejohn, Calvin Littlefield, and William B. Wooden. A Whig legislative caucus was called, and, to everybody's surprise, Mr. RICE received the majority. The Democrats supported Mr. RANDALL, who would have, but for this, been unanimously chosen. Mr. RICE was elected, and made an excellent officer, as our school history and school legislation amply show. But however much "Know-nothingism" entered into the matter, I am unprepared to speak intelligently. Not till several months after, when M. H. CLARK became a candidate for Comptroller, were there any "Know-nothings."

Mr. RICE was succeeded in 1856 by ANDREW S. DRAPER, the present incumbent. He became President of the "Guardian Savings Bank," then just organized, and continued in that position till his death in October, 1869. Whatever fault or crime may be confessed with the management of that institution, except Mr. WEED seems to insinuate it, I have heard no sound or whisper in any way involving the conduct of Mr. RICE; and I believe that his administration cannot be impugned for dishonesty and malfeasance.

BROOKLYN REFORM.

Report of the Committee of Seventy-Five on Election Frauds.

Synopsis of Affidavits Procured—How the Frauds Were Perpetrated—Tabular Statements by Wards—The Prospect Park Report.

The Committee of "Seventy-five" in Brooklyn have prepared a tabular statement, and synopsis of affidavits, showing the results of their investigation of alleged fraud in the last election, and ask the careful perusal of every citizen, whether Republican or Democrat. There are a number of officers of election indicted, who have not been tried, and there are others who may be indicted. The Committee have, in all cases where there is an indictment, or a likelihood of one, suppressed the names of the parties.

The affidavits received by the Committee show fraud and illegal practices in conducting the election in seventeen wards of the City, and in thirty-six election districts in those wards. The Fifth, Sixth, Tenth and Twenty-first are conspicuous for the unblushing and wholesale character of the frauds perpetrated in them. The affidavits show that all classes of officials connected with the election either connived at this dishonesty, or more openly took part in it. Inspectors, challengers, poll clerks, canvassers and watchers are all equally implicated. In the First District of the Fifth Ward the inspectors were detected substituting ballots for those given them. The man who called attention to this was assaulted, and promptly carried off by the Police for disorderly conduct. In the Fourth District of the same ward repeaters were spotted, but not arrested. In the Third, repeating began about 3 in the afternoon, and continued till the polls closed; inspectors were seen substituting ballots; men who challenged the repeaters were assaulted and beaten, and the Police refused to protect them. In the Eighth and Ninth, inspectors dropped ballots, and only canvassed the vote on the State ticket, estimating the votes for other candidates. In the First District of the Sixth Ward, 500 names were added to the poll lists before the voting began. Among these were the names of AUGUST BELMONT, OWEN HAND, THEODORE DEZEMON, and other celebrities. Besides these 500 fictitious votes, there were 342 votes cast by repeaters and non-residents. In the Second District of this ward, no canvass was made of any count, except of the State ticket, to all other candidates the canvassers gave such vote as seemed to them desirable. In the Fourth a pile of Republican splits were spirited away by the poll clerk, and never counted. In the Fifth and Sixth gangs of repeaters were plying their vocation, and any one challenging them was beaten and kicked out of the room, the Police as usual refusing to interfere. A shutter was kept on the window of the room, to prevent the ballot-boxes being seen, and when the polls were closed the room was cleared for an hour, during which the poll clerks industriously filled up all the blank spaces in the poll book. Two men kept a tally of the vote, but the paper was destroyed, and the men who had kept the tally burnt in his hand. Bowlines had the affair all in their hands, and did nearly as they pleased. The Police, in all cases, refusing to checkmate them. In the Third District of the Ninth Ward, the votes were received through a broken window, beside which stood a policeman actively on guard to checkmate any. The vote was counted in this district by a party unknown, and the numbers were several times altered before they were deemed satisfactory. In the Fourth District of the Tenth Ward, all hands, with one exception, got helplessly drunk before the canvass closed, (which was all fraudulent) and an accidental bystander was called in to complete the canvass. In the Second District of the Eleventh Ward, some half dozen individuals, including a policeman, took a hand in the canvass, and the numbers were cooked up to suit, after several alterations being made in them. In the Fifth District of the Twelfth Ward, when the canvass of the ward ticket was made, the box was found to contain one hundred more tickets than the poll list called for; the canvassers were puzzled a little at this, but one of them solved the difficulty by picking up a pile and throwing them away. Repeating was recklessly practiced in this district. A sham fight was got up during the canvass of the Assembly ticket in the First Ward, and in the scuffle a handful of tickets was mixed up with those on the table. The counting then proceeded. Inspectors in the First District of the Seventeenth Ward assisted voters to deposit the full number of eight ballots, remarking, if the number was short, that they knew the voter "wanted to vote all." The canvass was conducted with the most brazen fraud, and a number of rowdies intimidated any one present who dared to object. In the First District of the Nineteenth Ward a candidate for Alderman came to the polls with about twenty of his friends, all non-residents. They were prevented from voting by Inspector SEITZ, who knew them. Gangs of repeaters voted in the Third District of the same ward, and when one of these men was arrested he was rescued by a mob. In the Second District of the Twenty-first Ward a policeman was noticed destroying tickets and substituting others; any one who objected to this was driven out of the room. The ward-box overran forty-four, and the inspectors, to make the vote balance the poll-books, deducted eight votes from each candidate. In the Fourth District of the Twenty-first Ward an officer of the Water Board was seen prompting non-residents to vote, and all the policemen attending took a part in one way or another in the frauds carried on there. The names of a great number of persons are given who voted on false addresses, such as churches, vacant lots, schools, &c. In the Sixth District of the same ward men were dragged from the polls, ballots substituted, repeating flourished, and if any man dared to remonstrate, he was either beaten on the spot or carried off to the Police Station. This account may be fittingly summed up with what occurred in New-Utrecht, where a number of inebriates, under treatment at the Inebriate Asylum, were marched to the polls by the manager of the institution, and all deposited their votes, though not a man among them was a legal voter.

The following tables show the frauds as they were perpetrated in the several districts of the different wards, with the increase of the vote, the percentage of fraud, and the registration:

PROSPECT PARK.

The Subcommittee of the Committee of Fifty Across the Brooklyn Park Commissioners of Mismanagement and Extravagance.

The Subcommittee of the Committee of Fifty, to whom the investigation of the fiscal affairs of the Brooklyn Park Commissioners was referred, have made a lengthy report on the subject of their investigations. It covers the whole ground of the Park Commission, from its origin in 1859, to the present time, though the Committee report that they have, owing to their immense number, considered but a small, number of the complaints made to them. The charges which were specifically brought against the Park Commission, may be said to be: loose and negligent management, and costly and unnecessary extensions of Prospect Park for pecuniary emolument. Beginning with the act of incorporation in 1859, constituting a Board of Commissioners "to select and locate" grounds, to be set apart for parks, the report briefly recapitulates its provisions, and passes on to the various acts amending and extending it, down to the bill now in the hands of the Park Commission, and shortly to be presented to the Legislature, regulating and defining the manner of assessing property benefitted by the extension of the Park, and providing for the raising of money by tax. This document, the report observes, it will be well to look after when it is presented to the Legislature. The first purchase of grounds for the Park consisted of 206 acres, and cost $1,247,606; the Flatbush addition subsequently added, consisting of nineteen acres, at a cost of $158,559; another extension was made toward the south and Flatbush, 226 acres, at a cost of $753,745; a third extension, called the Litchfield property, was afterward made, consisting of fifty-seven acres, at a cost of $1,208,[illegible]; the cost of land, 1870, 1871, 1872, is little over one-third the entire cost of the lands taken for Central Park up to 1870, and Prospect Park is only about five-eighths the size of the former. By a law passed in 1870 it was provided that so much of Prospect Park as lay east of Flatbush avenue should be sold, the law, with the others providing for the extension of the Park, being in the way for persons acquainted with the plans of the Commission to speculate largely in the lands which would be affected by them. The extent to which this was done is shown by the Controller's books, from which it appeared lots which in 1869 cost the City $4,000, were taken by the Park Commissioners at $6,000; a number of other lots, bought for $61,895, were taken at $141,549, and so on in numerous other instances. Mayor KALBFLEISCH, in his message in 1870, characterized this proceeding as little less than a gigantic confidence operation. In addition to these charges against the Commissioners, there are distinctly shown to have had the funds appropriated to the Park for lobbying at Albany, and that, while there has been an immense expenditure, ostensibly for "improvements" the Park, there is little to show for it. Gen. E. L. VIELE, who designed the plans for both Central and Prospect Park, testified that one million dollars would have been ample to have improved the latter according to his plan, and that the expenditures had been most extraordinary. In conclusion, the Committee recommend that no further appropriations of money be made for the Park, and that the present Commission be abolished, and in place thereof, one official be appointed by the Mayor to have charge of the Department.

ENGLAND AND CANADA.

Authoritative Contradiction of the Story of a Secret Treaty.

The Chicago Times publishes a private letter from Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, Premier of Canada, formally contradicting the rumor of a secret treaty for the independence of Canada, in the following words:

I assure you that the story is altogether untrue; that it has no semblance nor shadow of truth, and that the subject of the severance of Canada from the Mother Country has never been a matter of discussion between the Government of Great Britain and the Dominion, or between Lord DE GREY and myself.

Sudden Death of a Stock Broker.

The unfortunate man who died suddenly on Friday night in MCINTYRE's saloon, No. 1,164 Broadway, proves to be BENJAMIN LYMAN MILLARD, for several years a bookkeeper for MATTHEW MORGAN'S SONS, and more recently a stock broker in Broad-street. He had in the latter business accumulated a handsome fortune, but by means of speculations and gaming had subsequently lost all. On his body was found a letter addressed to Col. W. R. VERMILYEA, detailing the fact that he had lost $20,000 during the past two years by unfortunate speculations, and ending the loss of life. The body was taken to the Morgue, to await the action of Coroner SCHIRMER, and will subsequently be removed to his native place in Connecticut for burial. Death is supposed to have resulted from hemorrhage of the lungs.

CUSTOMS BUREAU AT CASTLE GARDEN.

History of its Origin, and Significant Character of its Operations.

About two years ago the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury was turned to the delays to which emigrants were subjected in passing their effects through the Custom-house. The household goods, apparel, and other effects of this class were compelled to pass through precisely the same course which is pursued in entering and discharging cargoes of merchandise. Aside from the necessary, yet mysterious, forms of forms employed, the most serious objection to this was the great loss of time involved. Rarely could emigrants affect to pass the Custom-house in less than two days' time, and frequently they were detained three and four days; and sometimes even more than a week. Along with these troubles came considerable items of expense. A broker was necessary, as only a professional could undertake the task of leading the goods through the labyrinth of forms, and this involved a fee of at least five dollars, taken from the slender stock of the newly arrived stranger. To this charge was added cartage and detention at a boarding-house, exposed not merely

MONDAY, March 11—A. M.

The severe weather of last week partially depressed the general trade movements, and delayed the steamer arrivals from Europe. The Imports fell off very considerably from the previous week, and the sales of both Domestic and Foreign Goods were lighter. The Customs receipts into the Treasury were lighter from the same cause. The difference, however, will probably be made up this week, as the Imports now at sea and the demand for Goods for the interior are known to be large, and the prospects for the Spring Trade seldom so good as at present.

The weekly averages of the Associated Banks, Local and National, reporting through the Clearing-House for the week ending Saturday last, March 9, compare as follows with the previous week, and also with the corresponding week last year. To which we add the Gold and Currency balances in the New-York office of the United States Treasury, at these dates respectively:

	March 11, '71.	March 9, '72.	March 2, '72.
National Capital	$72,225,000	$71,725,000	$71,725,000
Loan Capital	15,325,500	15,370,500	15,370,500
Total	$88,570,500	$87,155,500	$87,155,500
Loans	280,853,204	281,245,400	280,200,100
Gold and Gold Notes	22,728,178	19,156,200	18,328,600
Other Legal Tenders	48,000,000	44,500,000	42,750,000
Deposits	220,924,284	216,261,000	210,472,800
Circulation	31,055,071	28,132,000	28,162,600
In Sub Treasury	11,027,603		10,321,673

The Bank return published this morning exhibits the relative strength of the movement in respect to the lawful Money held, as against the Circulation and Deposits, to which we add the position of the movement the week before, and also of the movement of the corresponding week last year:

	March 2, '72.	March 9, '72.	March 11, '72.
Deposits	$220,472,800	$216,261,000	$220,924,284
Circulation	28,162,600	28,132,000	31,055,071
Total	$248,635,400	$244,393,000	$251,979,355
Required in Vault	$62,158,850	$61,098,250	$62,994,839
Gold and Green-backs held	63,328,600	63,287,100	69,918,100
Excess	$1,169,750	$2,188,850	$6,923,261
Rate for money	7 ⅌ cent.	7 ⅌ cent.	6 ⅌ cent.

The Bank return strengthens the movement, as compared with last week, about $1,600,000 in the surplus of Lawful Money over the required 25 ⅌ cent. There is a moderate gain in both Gold and Greenbacks, $68,000 in the former, and $790,500 in Greenbacks. The general line of Deposits shows a small decrease, $70,800, owing in part to the contraction of $627,700 in Loans. The Circulation falls off $48,400.

Money was close at 7 ⅌ cent. most of the week, and on Saturday the Stock Brokers, owing to the enormous speculation in the Railroads and Miscellaneous Shares, the large advance in prices, and the frequent transfer of ownership, complained that their wants, in making up, were greater than their offerings of Money at the regular rate. The favorable turn in the Bank movement may relieve the market more comfortable this week. Further help to the Bank movement is looked for from the redemption of United States 5-20s, of 1862 this month, but to what extent is as yet quite uncertain, the Bonds coming in very slowly and four-fifths of them for Foreign account to be remitted for in Exchange or Gold. Already the Bankers have advanced their rate of Exchange to 109½ ⅌ cent. for 60 day Bills on London in anticipation of this extra demand, and the serious falling off in the Cotton export. Only 49,000 bales went forward last week against 193,000 in the first week of March last year. The price of Gold, however, shows no inclination to advance, and speculation, of late, seems to have deserted the Gold Room for the more exciting arena of the Stock Exchange.

The import entries at New-York, embracing Foreign Dry Goods and General Merchandise, for the week past were $7,170,217, as against $8,209,445 for the corresponding week last year. The exports of Domestic Produce, other than Gold and Silver, were $4,383,985 against $4,460,193 same week in 1870. The Export of Gold and Silver, $366,758, against $954,584, same week in 1871. The Customs in Gold paid into the New-York Office of the United States Treasury for the week were $9,722,234. The receipts of Cotton, coastwise and by rail, 13,580.

The Gold values of the Import entries of Foreign Merchandise at New-York, exclusive of Foreign Specie, since July 1, 1871, are as follows, the figures being official to Feb. 1, and since semi-official from the Custom-house:

In Stocks, Saturday, there was a fair measure of activity on the Railroads and Miscellaneous Shares, and the last-named were generally very strong. There was a fresh upward turn in Pacific Mail in the Afternoon from 61¾@61½ to 62½@62¾ ⅌ cent. It was stated on the Street that the latest of the bearish resorts to the Courts to depress the Stock was unsuccessful before Judge Gilbert. The additional fact was stated that the Court was not inclined to go into the case attempted to be made against the conduct of the Company, without an inquiry as to the character and good faith of the nominal plaintiff. There was a further rise to 94 ⅌ cent. in Canton Land Company, of Baltimore, the highest price ever known for the Stocks as it present divided. The Express stocks are also advancing on the increased Spring business of all the leading Companies. The New-York and Western Roads worked quietly through the First Board of the Exchange, the only marked exception being the continued active demand for Erie. The other Roads showed partial weakness until after the Bank Statement, when the general list manifested firmness, and closed as follows, as compared with Friday night. The Public Funds were dull, and Gold 110¾@110¾ ⅌ cent. In the South Carolina State Bonds there was a sudden rise of 4½ ⅌ cent. up to 56 ⅌ cent. for the January and July Bonds, on favorable legislation, looking to the full recognition of and future provision for the whole debt, at Columbia. The Consolidated Virginias also advanced to 58 ⅌ cent.

At the very close of the Hall of the Exchange, at a quarter to 3 P. M., the quotations for the Railroad and Miscellaneous Stocks were feverish.

We are glad to learn that the success of the Daily Financial Record has encouraged Mr. ALLEY to enlarge his paper to make room for a greater variety of reading matter outside of the Wall-street and Stock Exchange reports, and spirit of the morning Press on financial points, which have hitherto given it peculiar interest to Bankers and Brokers.

Capt. W. H. SWIFT and his co-trustees to the Hamilton and St. Joseph Land Grant Mortgage advertise to pay off $50,000 of the Bonds to holders submitting, under seal, the best terms for the trust, by March 20, at the office of Messrs. WARD, CAMPBELL & CO., No. 56 Wall-street. See Advertisement.

The Legislature of Alabama has established a Sinking Fund for the liquidation of the entire State Debt, indorsements included, and pledged a special Sinking Fund tax of five mills per annum on the dollar. This is worthy of a State that up to the recent difficulties with the Alabama and Chattanooga Bonds never faltered in her obligations to the public creditors. We understand the present Act to settle the validity of the Alabama and Chattanooga Bonds with the exception of $500,000, about which there is some technical or legal difficulty between the State and the Railroad, but which Bonds have passed into third hands for advances made on the faith of the State. We hope this trouble will soon be removed so as to give the State a clear record.

FISK & HATCH.

HARVEY FISK,

THE 8 PER CT. FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND
LAND GRANT BONDS OF THE ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY, in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100, Coupon or Registered, can now be obtained to a limited amount only from the undersigned, or through the principal Banks and Bankers throughout the United States.

The safety and reliability of these Bonds is evidenced in the continued and increasing demand for them by prudent and careful investors, who have invested in them after a more thorough and rigid examination of the security pledged for their payment, both interest and principal.

THEY ARE SECURED by a first and only mortgage on the Company's railroad, (which will soon connect the Union Pacific Road at Fort Kearney with the City of St. Joseph, Mo., already an important railroad centre,) upon the franchises of the same—upon the equipment and personal property of every description—upon the Land Grant of the Company granted by Special Act of Congress, approved July 23, 1866, amounting to 1,700,000 acres, which has been officially Certified to the Company by the Commissioner of the General Land Office in his official report to Congress, transmitted through the Secretary of the Interior on Jan. 10, 1872.

The Bonds are issued only as they represent a completed and equipped Road; all proceeds of Bonds beyond this are held by the Trustees in trust until the necessary completion entitle the Company to those proceeds.

The Road is built first-class in every particular, and has been so received and accepted by the Department of the Interior.

The Mortgage Deed of Trust prohibits the sale of any of the Company's Lands at less than four ($4) dollars per acre, payable to the Trustees and applied to the payment of the Bonds, through the operation of the Sinking Fund. The payment of the Bonds before maturity is not compulsory upon the holders.

The Bonds are therefore secured by two classes of property combined in one mortgage, the value of either largely exceeding the amount of bonds which can be issued under the mortgage.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York.

The Bonds have thirty years to run, with both principal and interest payable in Gold. The Principal payable in New-York, the interest at eight (8 p. c.) per cent., payable in February and August either in New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the-Main, free of tax.

Price 97½ and accrued interest in Currency. The Bonds are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for the Company's Land Sales. Maps, circulars, documents and full information furnished on application.

The Bonds of this Company have always been received with favor by investors and capitalists, have always commanded a ready market, and we unhesitatingly recommend them—believing the loss will rank equally with that of the Eastern Division issues, which are now selling at a premium above par.

SEVEN-THIRTY GOLD BONDS.

The calling in by the Treasury of $40,000,000 additional 5-20s, which was commenced on the 7th inst., naturally leads to an increased demand for other investment securities, prominent among which are the NORTHERN PACIFIC FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS. To these we direct the attention of investors as being a first-class security, both in the value of the property on which the bonds are based, and the large return of income derived from the investment, which is over thirty per cent. upon the sum to earned on an equal amount invested in coin. The basis of the land grant, which secures the NORTHERN PACIFIC 7-30 BONDS is a strong feature, as it gives to the bondholder a mortgage on valuable lands that are worth double the amount of bonds issued, making this one of the safest and most profitable of any now offered to investors. Present price of the Bonds, Par and interest in Currency. JAY COOKE & CO., New-York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The Pacific Mail Stock—Injunction—Hearing Before Judge Gilbert in the Kings County Supreme Court.

As previously announced in the TIMES, an ex parte injunction was obtained from Judge GILBERT, in the Kings County Supreme Court, on Tuesday last, restraining the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company from speculating in their own stock, but it was vacated on the same evening. The next day LUTHER C. CHALLIS obtained an order to show cause why the injunction should not be made returnable yesterday. The parties in interest appeared before Judge GILBERT at the hour named, and Mr. PRYOR submitted the papers for the plaintiff. The complaint shows that the plaintiff sues in behalf of himself and all the other stockholders in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and that he is the owner of 400 shares of its capital stock; that prior to Nov. 15, 1871, a surplus fund of over $1,000,000, the property of said Company, had been accumulated, and had been invested in Government securities, so as to be exempt from hazard of loss and ready to be used in any emergency; that after said Company came under the control of the defendants they withdrew said fund, and are now using it in speculations in stocks and otherwise, wherefore plaintiff demands judgment. First—That the defendants be restrained and enjoined from loaning said surplus or reserve fund, or any part thereof, and from using, employing, or expending it otherwise than in the prosecution of the legal and legitimate business of said Company. Second—That the defendants be directed and compelled to call in and collect any and all of said fund that may be out on loan, or otherwise employed or invested contrary to law; and, Third—for such order and further relief as to the Court may seem just.

Judge NEILSON, in reply, read the affidavit of A. B. STORY, President of the Company, to the effect that 400 shares of the stock was on the 3d and 4th of March transferred to the name of the plaintiff for the purpose of bringing this action, and that he is not the real owner of the stock, and shows that a surplus fund of $1,000,000 had been accumulated and invested in United States bonds, and that there is $600,000 in cash on hand.

The defendants asked for a reference to investigate Mr. CHALLIS' character, and an injunction to restrain him meanwhile.

Judge GILBERT denied the injunction, but allowed the reference. The matter stands adjourned until March 20.

A Loyal Virginian's Bequest to His Daughter.

From the Richmond Dispatch, March 6.

During the last week the last will and testament of an old citizen of Richmond was admitted to record in the Chancery Court of this city. In it occurs the following passages, whose are surely a curiosity in will literature:

"To my daughter ——, who has done so much to alienate my affections, but who I still design in my heart of hearts to love as an evidence of the beauties of her description of manners and education, doctrines and aims which have reduced me from affluence to beggary, and as she yet thinks, perhaps, that 'The Lost Cause' will be regained, she may think my bequest as valuable, more so, possibly, than the same amount given to Yankee securities, I give her the following, viz.: The Constitution of the U. S. & Ordinance, $25,000; 18 servants' emancipation by secession, $18,000; insurance and bank stock, $15,000; all my claims against the so-called Confederate Government, for the wanton, cruel, and wicked confiscation of my property on the 1st of April, 1865, $600,000. I could continue the list to the extent of more than half a million of dollars, but the above will suffice. She will see what the effect of secession has been, but for which I could have left my children a handsome competency."

The New-York Times,
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with unfailing energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The editorial care will be devoted to gathering political news from reliable sources during this Presidential canvass. The department of the paper will be eminently full and trustworthy. Renewed energies will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly edition; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

Of all the pleasures of this world, that of being an Erie lawyer would seem to be the most delusive. Here is Mr. SHEARMAN, of the well-known firm of FIELD & SHEARMAN, who testifies that he never got a favorable decision from Judge BARNARD for Erie yet; that he did not like to bring cases before Judge BARNARD for decision; and that he had even brought a case to Elmira to avoid bringing it before Judge BARNARD. This shows that the fame of FIELD & SHEARMAN as champions of Erie in the First Judicial District was an illusion. Perhaps BARNARD's prejudice against SHEARMAN, as the author of the unkind article on the Judge's morals in the North American Review, may have interfered with the interests of Erie. Is it possible that JAY GOULD has been taken in by this pretentious law firm?

It is a curious fact that members of the Legislature are never bribed. They may be interested in contracts controlled by persons seeking legislation, but we have the authority of Mr. GREELEY for the assertion that this is only "a shrewd business operation." Or they may take some of one thousand dollars or so for getting persons extraordinary opportunities for defrauding merchants, but if we understand the testimony of Mr. WALKER R. PARKER this, in the opinion of Hon. JAS. W. HUSTED—an expert—comes under the head of legal services. But there is no bribing!

The persistent efforts of the Democrats to persuade the people that they are the sole trustworthy guardians of the public interests, are failing precisely where the people have the best opportunities of judging their pretensions. The local elections throughout the State show steady and general Republican gains. In addition to the counties already referred to, Livingston, Madison and Ulster are to be counted. The vote of these and other counties betrays neither indifference nor estrangement.

The Erie lobby will work like beavers this week. The Erie bills have been made the special order for Wednesday in the Senate, and for Thursday in the House. GOULD and his captains go up today or to-morrow. But the Legislature must remember one plain, undisputed fact: The bill reported by the Committees to the two Houses is the simplest possible measure for taking the Erie Road out of the hands of swindlers and putting it into the hands of its lawful owners. No half or more than this, which the Committees have carefully constructed, to achieve this end, and any substitutes or amendments which do not operate directly and solely to this end are tricks, which are sure of detection, and which it will be certain disgrace to father or help.

New-Hampshire.

The campaign in New-Hampshire is a very striking illustration of the position of parties in the country. It is a struggle between the Republican Party and a combination of all the hostile or indifferent elements that can be allied against it. The New-Hampshire Republicans are not called upon to meet the Democrats only, whom they would have no reason to shun in a fair field; but these are reinforced by the "Assistant Democrats," or Labor Reform leaders, who have organized to draw off from the Republican candidate all the Republican laboring men who will not support a Democrat pure and simple; to these again must be added the Prohibitionists, who have selected the present as a fit time to make a diversion practically for the Democrats who have no sympathy whatever with their views; and last, as well as least, are the Republicans who have been affected by the attempts of Messrs. SCHURZ and TIPTON to involve the Administration in suspicion of corruption.

To all this motley array, the Republicans oppose the solid mass of those who believe that the party has served the country well, and continues to deserve its confidence. The result is that the success of the Republican ticket in New-Hampshire would be regarded with satisfaction by a large majority of the people of the country. It represents, in the contest of to-morrow, and in the limited field which the struggle occupies, the sentiment of the country. But what and whom does the opposition to the Republican ticket represent? It is impossible to say. So utterly without unity of purpose are the factions contending against it that they are not even agreed as to whether a victory is wholly desirable. Discreet Democrats, who know how dangerous are the substantial elements of their party, and how completely it is under the control of those elements when they choose to assert themselves, seriously doubt whether a defeat of the Republicans in New-Hampshire would not make it impossible to play, even respectably, that game of deceit on which hinge all their hopes of again tasting of the flesh-pots of Washington. Nothing is more certain than that even a slight and partial advantage in New-Hampshire will be followed by a bitter quarrel in the Democratic ranks. One section will insist that the victory showed that the party—with all its rooted tendencies, opposed to the settlement of the financial and political questions of the war—was still strong; that hatred of the negro and treachery to the creditors of the nation were popular; and that the mire of corruption in which the Democracy is hopelessly involved, had not given any displeasure to the people. The other side, composed of far more clear-sighted, but of far fewer Democrats, would claim that the result was due to the ingenious cloaking of the real character of the party, and to the liberal alliances entered into with every form of discontent among the Republicans. Whichever view might be correct, as far as New-Hampshire was concerned, the arguments of both alike would reveal the rottenness of an organization, the condition of which permitted such a dispute.

We have no doubt that considerations of this character will have their weight with the people of New-Hampshire, and that they will leave no room for doubt as to the significance of their vote. If the well-matured and desperate schemes of fraud concocted by the Democrats are, as we believe they will be, successfully met by the efforts of the Republican managers, the State will give the key-note to the Presidential canvass.

Erie Affairs.

It is a poor compliment to the intelligence and common honesty of the southern tier of counties, through which the Erie Road passes, to assume, as some of our contemporaries do, that their representatives at Albany may possibly interpose their votes to shield the robbers of the road from condign punishment. The honest masses of the southern counties know and doubtless feel that it must be through the conviction and disgrace of JAY GOULD and his guilty confederates, that their just pride in this great property can ever again be awakened.

The talk of foreign influence to the prejudice of the road, or of the counties through which it runs, is a shallow and miserable pretext to divert attention from the real issue now before the Legislature, which is plainly between an outraged public sentiment and the road on the one hand, and the robbers of the road and its stockholders on the other. The influences at work to bring the wrongdoers to judgment are the promptings of no alien, or hostile, or unfriendly interest to the Erie property. They spring from the common instinct of the whole commercial world against the downright robbery, to the extent of tens of millions of dollars, of the exchequer of this great corporation. They are seconded by the sentiment of common honesty and State pride of the masses of the people of New-York, because of the scandal which these persistent robberies, for four years past, have brought upon the judiciary, and legislation, and commercial honor of the first Commonwealth in the American Union.

Need we refresh the memory of the representatives of the people who will this week be called upon to take sides on the Erie scandal, as to the vile nature and real extent of a few of the more prominent robberies of this brotherhood of banditti in the last four years? We might do so without leaving the single [illegible] during these years [illegible] sum of [illegible] during the years [illegible] the quarterly [illegible] of the Treasury collections a tax of $2,012,420, the most of which was on cotton, so that the total sum to be refunded to the fortunate cotton-growers would be about twenty millions of dollars! When it is remembered that the whole income tax of last year was only some fifteen millions, one can judge what a new and immense burden is thus calmly proposed to be put on our shoulders.

But the absurdity is yet to come. A tax on a product is seldom paid, even in part, by the producer; it certainly is not paid by him if he has practically a monopoly of his product. The tax on raw cotton was paid by the planter at the nearest collection district. He at once included it in the price to the local broker; the broker put it (with a slight profit) in his price to the New-York broker, or the agent of the Massachusetts manufacturer; the Northern manufacturer added it to the price of his goods, or the New-York cotton-dealer included it in his price to the spinner, and the spinner to the consumer. This fact was not stated, of course, by each one of these persons; but bales of cotton that were not accompanied by a certificate or other legal evidence that they had paid the tax, were compelled to be sold at a reduction from the market rate, equal to the amount of the tax due. Any manufacturer using cotton, without legal evidence of payment of tax, became liable for the tax; and, if we mistake not, was exposed to a fine also. If, then, Congress proposes to refund these seventy millions of unjust tax, they clearly should not do it to the planter, who has already been paid for it, nor to the broker who has been reimbursed, with a profit beside, nor to the manufacturer who received dollar for dollar, with a profit, from the consumer for the tax.

Evidently, it is the duty of Congress to collect from every manufacturer the names of the wholesale dealers of cotton goods to whom they sold such goods during the years between 1862 and 1868, and these again the retailers who bought of them. Here we shall begin to get at the unfortunate sufferers under this tax. All the customers of these retailers of cotton goods paid the tax: every buyer of cheap calico, prints, sheeting, and the like, during those six years, was unconstitutionally taxed, and should at once have a share in the seventy millions refunded. As the task of collecting their names and proportional share in the tax would be somewhat difficult, we suggest that the seventy million dollars be divided equally among the twenty millions of loyal people then living, or their heirs, thus giving each man, woman and child three dollars and a half per head for their share in the tax.

Should any of the members of Congress—who seem to have interested themselves in everything but political economy—doubt when the cotton tax was finally paid, let them look at the last which was passed, allowing a drawback of this tax on goods exported to foreign countries. It was found that our merchants could not compete with goods made in Europe from Indian and other cottons, which did not pay this tax, so Congress allowed upon all goods, made from taxed cotton, when exported, a drawback to be paid to the exporter, equal to the tax paid upon the cotton, as shown by the tax certificates. The framers of that law evidently understood that the planter had been already reimbursed for the tax, and that the manufacturer was paying it, until he should collect it from his customer. Congress having allowed one drawback on raw cotton to the exporter, would now generously grant another on the same lot to the planter. This is "scientific legislation."

Modern Astrology.

From the standpoint of the picturesque, it seems almost a pity that the fine old science of astrology is so fast falling into disrepute and neglect. Time was when kings and queens were counted among its patrons, and the great ones of the earth sought its aid to circumvent their enemies, or propitiate the more inexorable fates. Even in its delusions there was often something akin to grandeur. The idea of an elixir of life has, even in these prosaic modern days, a certain fascination for the highest order of minds, as witness HAWTHORNE'S weird story of Septimus Galton. To the dream of the transmutation of metals may fairly be conceded an inspiration less ignoble than simple avarice, while the attempt to wrest from the silent stars the secrets of the future had in it even an element of sublimity. And then, what delightful impossibilities were hidden in the magic mirror. It may be that these good philosophers were not always confined to such harmless labors. From some of them it was whispered a despairing lover could get not only his horoscope, but subtle potions to win either an unloving mistress or silence a hated rival. Or they would fashion at need for a good customer a little waxen figure of his enemy, which, being held in the flame of a candle, would cause the original to wither away and consume piece by piece with the model. In such diversions that excellent queen, CATHARINE DE MEDICIS, it is said, was fond of whiling away her leisure. But it was only the bad astrologers, let us trust, who were guilty of these disloyal practices. The good ones, we may be sure, would never have countenanced such iniquity without being roundly paid for it.

It must not be forgotten either that the real sciences are not a little indebted to the misdirected, but prodigiously earnest and prolific labors of this wayward sister. Chemistry has learned much from the alchemist's crucible; astronomy has profited by his vain study of the heavens; from the simples which he culled from the fields to serve his occult lore, botany and medicine alike have borrowed some of their knowledge. In an age when learning was limited to a few, the astrologer had much of what was going, and if he often made use of his comprehensive enlightenment to play upon [illegible] values superstitious, it is a weakness of which men of science, even now, are sometimes guilty. Besides, he was a figure to delight and dazzle the eye of romance. Tall, and with a venerable white beard, (no astrologer could have had a movement's faith without these advantages,) clad in that well-known flowing robe of black velvet, inscribed with the signs of the zodiac and still more mysterious hieroglyphics, the ancient astrologer as he was first dimly seen through the rather unpleasant smoke of his crucible, in that high-vaulted chamber at the top of the lonely tower with which we are so familiar, must have been to his awe-struck clients a most impressive object. Even now, when he is seen only on the stage and with disillusioned eyes, he is sure to win all the reverence of the gallery.

But with the other darlings of romance the astrologer has passed away. Dr. FAUST and CORNELIUS AGRIPPA have left no legitimate successors. Soothsayers, indeed, we have of a feeble fashion, who lift up their voices at intervals and prophesy vain things. But one and all, from ZADKIEL to the good Dr. GREELEY, their ravings get no credit, and these false prophets have little honor in their own or any country. There is, too, a tribe of wretched pretenders to the authority of the old star-gazers, who dwell mostly in obscure back streets, call themselves by high-sounding names of exotic flavor, are all, without exception, seventh daughters or seventh sons, and will read any comer out of hand, for a dollar or two, a most alluring fortune. But alas! who can place faith in these wretched impostors when all their foresight cannot guard their own horoscopes from the commonest and most ignominious chances? In a London Police Court not long ago was presented a sight to make ZOROASTER turn in his grave. Prof. ZENDAVESTA, Prof. CICERO, Prof. THALABY and Prof. BARETTA were arraigned as professional astrologers, and sent to the House of Correction to be put at hard labor for three months. All their boasted skill in nativities could not arm them against that mishap. And here we have in our own City a sorceress to whom the minds of men are supposed to be as a written scroll, swindled by the most commonplace and clumsy of devices. Her name, which seems hardly so good for conjuring as ZADKIEL's, but still not without suggestion, is Mme. JULIANA WINGEBODEFF, and her oracular tripod is situated in Division-street. On Wednesday her unlucky star brought to her temple of divination three wretches of malign nativity, who, unawed by the sacred place or the fear of astrological vengeance, betrayed the hapless sorceress into advancing seventy odd dollars on a deposit of oroide watches, the oracle meantime uttering no word of warning nor even the feeblest remonstrance. Assuredly, when we can have no better sorcery than this, no more successful prophesying than Dr. GREELEY's, it is time to own our deficiencies, and acknowledge that whatever other triumphs the age may have achieved, astrology at least is a lost art.

The Controller of the Currency.

It has been known for sometime past that the Banking and Currency Committee of the House of Representatives was prosecuting an inquiry into certain official acts of the Controller of the Currency. So long as the facts elicited were kept by the Committee in strict confidence, there could be no propriety in alluding to so grave a subject as that involving the personal and official character of a prominent public officer. But now that the Committee is permitting its evidence to dribble out into the newspapers, we have a word to say to its members regarding what seems to us a plain matter of duty on their part,—or at least upon the part of the Republican members of the Committee. They fully understand the terms of the law under which the Controller holds his office. He is appointed for five years, and cannot be removed except for cause. He was reappointed only a month ago, on a strong pressure from prominent men, and on the assurance that he had been vindicated from all charges of official misconduct. We questioned the propriety of his reappointment; but the Tribune,—which now allows itself to be the vehicle of assault on the Controller, for the purpose, doubtless, of again pointing a moral on the President's abuse of the appointing power,—strongly advised it, and the Tribune prevailed. It thus spoke, Jan. 23:

"Hon. H. R. HULBURD, Controller of the Currency, whose term is about to expire, has been somewhat injured in public esteem by the malfeasance of Examiner CALLENDER. We are satisfied that this impression is unjust—that Mr. HULBURD was wholly ignorant of CALLENDER'S borrowings from banks over which he exercised supervision. We trust, therefore, that Mr. HULBURD may be reappointed."

Without expressing any opinion as to the merits of the case as presented by any facts thus far made public, it seems to us to be the plain duty of the Banking and Currency Committee to place the facts they have elicited in the hands of the President, with their recommendation, whatever it may be, so that he may have just cause for acting as he will desire to act, if the charges are sustained. This much is certainly due to him, before the matter becomes the subject of public discussion. We trust Mr. HOOPER and his colleagues will see to it that the President is at once informed that in their judgment Mr. HULBURD should be removed,—or else that, in their opinion, the charges against him are not sustained. The law leaves the President's action in this case, and inasmuch as he must take the responsibility of retaining or removing Mr. HULBURD, it is manifestly unjust to keep the facts from him, no matter whether they are favorable or unfavorable to the Controller.

MINOR TOPICS.

The abatement in the severity of the weather yesterday foreshadows the approach of Spring, though we may yet experience a few cold days before the end of March. The rain did a little toward cleaning our neglected streets, though the lower portions of the City were never in a more wretched condition than now, owing to the masses of ice and filth with which they are choked. We present on our eighth page to-day, accurate descriptions of all the down-town streets, as taken up by our reporters, and [illegible] a sanitary point of view. Since Mr. BOOTH offered to act, we see no right to the money-lending contract, he seems to consider his work ended, so the sooner the Street-cleaning Commissioners make some new arrangement the better it will be for the health of the City.

There is clearly a disposition abroad in France to look kindly on the proposal to legalize gambling and lotteries in that country. The Figaro, in a recent number, devotes more than a column to considerations on this subject, and intimates an intention speedily to return to it. The writer says that the law of 1836, while abolishing the houses of play, did not put an end to the passion for it. He contends that private gambling-houses, clubs, &c., are worse than public ones, and points particularly to the fact that while the maximum of the good is limited in the former, in the latter it is not. Further he asks whether those countries in which gambling, as at Spa and Frankfort, is prohibited are any worse than others? In England, of late years, gambling at cards has gone out of fashion, and the turf and the Stock Exchange have taken its place. It is not to be doubted that in many cases the turf has at all events proved quite as disastrous as the card table. Lord COURTENAY's debts—the result of turf transactions—were lately stated in the Court of Bankruptcy at $3,500,000. The late Marquis of HARTINGTON died penniless, and they are only two out of very many. It is a difficult question to decide whether much real advantage accrues from prohibiting play tables, if, as the writer in the Figaro endeavors to show, there are and always will be, numbers who say, "I will gamble and nobody shall stop me," and it becomes merely a question of the manner of doing it. Certainly no place at this moment offers greater facilities for the gambler than this City, and the green table, the Stock Exchange, and the trotting course are "all before him where to choose."

The country about Kansas City, in Missouri, would seem to be a good field for missionary labor. Not long since some of the members of Salem Church, in that vicinity, had a falling out about some trifling matter, and, coming to blows, were cited by the deacons to answer for the impropriety. During the trial, which took place in the church, the dispute was renewed, the adversaries whipped out their revolvers and a free fight ensued, resulting in the death of one of the parties and the serious wounding of one or two others. If the Christians of that neighborhood are of such a pattern, what must the heathen be?

When Poland was a kingdom, the Catholic Primate of Poland was a person of considerable importance, and was ex officio Regent, in case of the death of the King, and until a new Sovereign was elected. The Pope, it appears, has just appointed the Archbishop of Posen to the Primacy of an imaginary Poland. There is no apparent reason for this step, except the hope of annoying Protestant Germany by an active show of sympathy for those who dream of a reconstructed Catholic Poland. If this sort of thing eases the mind of the Pope, it is not probable that BISMARCK will make any objection to it. The new Primate is in the position of the traditional person who is instructed that the first step toward cooking a hare is to catch the animal. Doubtless, as the possible Regent of a kingdom, he could annoy BISMARCK to some extent, but his first effort must be to catch his kingdom, and it is difficult to imagine a more hopeless task than that of resurrecting the Poland of a century ago.

The oil dealers of Venango County are just at present in a state of excitement which is extremely inconsistent with the smoothness of the material in which they deal. It is alleged that certain speculators not having the fear of New-York refiners before their eyes, have made a conspiracy to forward all the crude oil of the Oil Creek region to Cleveland and Pittsburg, and moreover to charge enormous rates for the transportation. Wherefore, Oil Creek is in a ferment, and clamorous popular meetings are held, in which greasy capitalists denounce the schemes of the conspirators. In order to thwart this latter, it is proposed to lay pipes from Oil Creek to Pittsburg, and also to Lake Erie, so that oil can be kept on tap, as it were, at both these points. This plan is one which ought to have been adopted long ago, and the present excitement will be of substantial service to the oil regions if it results in the building of these gigantic oil conduits.

The rent-roll of the Tichborne estate is upward of sixteen thousand pounds a year. Assuming that the trial has cost two hundred thousand pounds, this could be easily raised at four per cent. on the property, and the interest payable thereupon would represent half the income. The present Baronet being a minor, who will not be of age for many years, would probably only be allowed a thousand a year for educational and other expenses, so that by the time he attains his majority the property will have fully recovered the costs caused by "the claimant."

Amusements—Announcements for This Evening.

Miss NILSSON sings in "Roberto," at the Academy of Music, this evening, for the first time in the United States. At Wood's, a new drama, called "The Working Men of New-York," will be produced. At Booth's, Mr. Booth will appear as Mark Antony, in "Julius Cæsar." The representations of the week just ended are to be repeated elsewhere.

Destructive Fire in Sydney, New South Wales.

Advices from New South Wales set forth that, shortly after 3 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, the 7th of January, a fire broke out at the Prince of Wales Opera-house, and, before it could be extinguished, completely destroyed the theatre, and injured, more or less seriously, about a score of other houses. The lofty southern wall of the opera-house, which was of brick, and about four feet in thickness, gave way and fell over into King-street, knocking down four two-story shops which intervened as if they had been erected of cards. This wall in its descent also came in contact with a fire-engine which was being conveyed along the centre of King-street, which it smashed, besides seriously injuring three young men named COATES, VAUGHAN and POST, who had been propelling it along the street. The first of these died on the day of the accident; and the others shortly afterward, while the third lay in the Sydney Infirmary, in a very precarious state. All three had sustained concussion of the brain. At an inquest on the bodies of the young men who died, evidence was given which led the jury to the conclusion that the fire had originated in the property—even of the theatre, where there had been stored colored fires for use in the transformation scene of the Christmas pantomime. The evidence of an analytical chemist went to prove that under certain conditions these fires are liable to spontaneous combustion. The Opera House, together with its contents, was not insured. This loss alone will amount to about $50,000. Subscriptions were being quickly raised for the relief of the poor people who have lost their all by the conflagration. A theatre which occupied the same site was completely destroyed by fire a little more than eleven years ago.

NEW CHICAGO.

Legislation for the Establishment of Land Titles.

Gov. Palmer and the Malcontent Republicans—Railroad Matters—Fifteen Miles of New Buildings Going Up—The Temperance Law and the Liquor Traffic.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, March 5, 1872.

General news of importance is rather scarce, except that which you doubtless receive by telegraph. Only one Alderman has been added to the "jail ring" since my last. Others are patiently waiting the pleasure of the prosecuting officers.

The Legislature has passed a law relating to the burnt records, deeds, mortgages, &c., in this county. It provides for establishing titles through a chancery process in the Courts. It is not obligatory, and will not be resorted to by those who are satisfied with their present titles. A law has also been passed for a reassessment of property, the rolls relating to which were destroyed by the fire.

It seems that the "Liberal Republicans" have been approaching Gov. PALMER, and tendering him a Presidential nomination. He respectfully declines the honor, preferring to see Gen. GRANT re-elected, notwithstanding he was not pleased with his "invasion of the sovereignty of the State of Illinois by sending troops to Chicago" after the fire.

The Apportionment bill for Senators and members of the House, which has been adopted, is free, as far as I can discover, from those unfair, gerrymandering features which have disgraced so much of our legislation, the country over, on this subject. It apparently gives the Republicans a good working majority in both Houses, but we cannot tell how it, combined with the new voting system, will work until after election. There is not much discussion yet about our State Convention for the appointment of delegates to Philadelphia. It will be a quiet, one-sided affair, according to present indications.

RAILROADS.

We are in the midst of quite a lively controversy in relation to railroads. There are fifteen new lines seeking an entrance into the city, principally in the West Division. They, of course, wish to reach as near to the centre of business as practicable, and, to do this, have to run about four miles within the city limits. Passing through streets and across streets necessarily depreciates the value of property abutting upon them. Naturally the owners are opposed to the roads coming through their streets, while they are perfectly willing that they should traverse any others. Hence we are having public meetings, heated discussions and newspaper articles in great abundance. The general feeling is in favor of letting these roads come in on the same terms as the others have. Railroads have built up Chicago without the city, as a municipality, having spent or run in debt a dime for their construction. Every new one adds to our business and our wealth; so that it is as much for the interest of the city as it is for that of the roads that they have every possible facility extended to them. But there has been the same kind of opposition from the beginning. It was very bitter, and came from some of our most intelligent citizens, when the Illinois Central proposed to come in on the lake front and bring the Michigan Central with it. "It will ruin our property," we remember hearing Gov. BROSS say with much impetuosity, and so said the rest. But in less than two years they woke up and found their property quadrupled in value by those roads without any effort on their part.

Then there is a controversy about the three blocks on the lake front, between Monroe and Randolph streets, east of Michigan-avenue. There has been some legislation by which the city is apparently bound to convey this tract to the railroads at eight hundred thousand dollars. Up to the time of the fire this transfer, upon these terms, was generally opposed, as according to the price of land elsewhere, these blocks are worth not less than three millions of dollars. Upon this land the Illinois Central, the Michigan Central, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and, possibly, the Baltimore and Ohio, propose to erect a mammoth union depot. It is just the place for it. It would add millions of dollars to the value of property in the south and north divisions to have the depot placed here rather than in the alternative location on land owned by the Illinois Central, about a mile and a half south. The prospect now is that the arrangement contemplated by the legislation of two years ago will be consummated, and that we shall have a grand union freight and passenger depot just on the spot where it will best accommodate the general business of the city. It would be a misfortune to have it fail through, even though the roads are not required to pay the full value of the land. The fact of the depot being located at this point will make up much more in the increase of real estate values than what the city fails to receive as a just compensation for the land. There is some feeble opposition still, but it comes from those whose lake view is in danger of being obstructed by the buildings which may be erected.

RENTS.

Rents are fearfully high this Spring. In the West Division the advance has been from fifty to one hundred per cent. over last year in favored localities. But all the indications are that in twelve months there will be a reaction, and that old rates, and possibly less, will prevail. There is a great demand for cheap tenements, such as mechanics and laboring men occupy. The fire filled all the vacant ones last Fall, and large numbers huddled together who will want to swarm as soon as warm weather sets in. Besides, the great rush of mechanics from all parts of the country and even Europe—the vanguard of which is already here—will still further largely increase the demand for dwellings. It would be well for those with families to leave them where they are for the present, and not bring them here without knowing whether they can secure a shelter for them.

NEW BUILDINGS.

The building season may be said to have commenced in earnest. The mild weather of the past few weeks, and the prospect that we shall have no more serious frosts, have encouraged contractors to go forward with the work they had in hand, and much progress has been made. There are now from fifteen to twenty miles of frontage either under way or soon to be. Our citizens have learned something by experience, as the thick walls now going up fully testify. They are looking more to stability than heretofore, and less to mere ornamentation. But still, with many, both of these qualities are to be combined. New Chicago will be much nearer fire-proof than old Chicago, and the burnt district on the South Side, as a whole, will be greatly improved, especially the southern and eastern sections of it.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

Chicago is to have an addition to her industrial pursuits, in the shape of a cotton manufactory—the first one in the State. It is not a very large one, to be sure, working only about two hundred hands, but it is a beginning, and will doubtless be gradually extended until it equals the large "corporations" of the East. It is located at Brighton, on the canal, in the extreme south-west section of the city—in fact, I don't know but it is beyond the city limits. Mr. ADAM CHRIST, one of our heavy capitalists, is the projector, and he purposes to open a jobbing house "down town" for the disposal of his goods.

A new watch factory, a little north of the city limits, has recently gone into operation. It is owned by Messrs. PAUL CORNELL and others, who have abundant means to make it a success. The buildings were erected last Summer.

CHICAGO MORALS.

The Tribune is again growling because I state some unpalatable facts. The sketch of matters here which I gave in that "we may see ourselves as others see us," was published in the belief that it would serve to do us good. Let us see how stands the case. Before the law there were about twenty-five hundred licensed saloons in operation. These, according to an elaborate and detailed statement published in the Tribune, cost the industry of the city fifteen million dollars a year, paid to them over the counter for intoxicating drinks. There were scattered about fifteen hundred of them. There were two hundred and eighty-nine in the First Ward, two hundred in the Second, and the North Side was covered with them. Four months elapsed, and about eleven hundred of the burnt-out ones were in operation again somewhere, the Police reporting nineteen hundred and eighty-seven in existence, and six hundred of these being located without license, which does not speak very well for the efficiency of faithfulness of either our municipal authorities or the internal revenue officers. Our Mayor is one of the Tribune editors, and, perhaps, wrote the article alluded to above. During the canvass appeals were made to temperance men and church members to vote for him, as a general reform was promised. A new departure toward both these things was to be inaugurated. But instead, liquor saloons are licensed by the hundred, and with their congeners gambling hells and brothels, have been permitted to set themselves down in respectable residence neighborhoods, on Wabash-avenue, on Michigan-avenue, on the cross streets everywhere. The Mayor grants the licenses, and there seems to be no end to them. Five theatres are in operation—not very expensive ones, of course, but they are sustained. It may be the part of a "malignant," as the Tribune would have it, to reveal unpleasant truths. Possibly not. The physician reveals unpleasant truths to his patient, and applies unpleasant remedies, without the slightest malice. The fact is, the evil among us is sooner reconstructed than the good—also one sooner than churches, or school-houses, or business-houses. I would have it otherwise, and by calling attention to this state of things, hope to produce a reform. The Tribune thinks I ought to have given credit to our members of the Legislature who assisted in giving us the improved liquor law. I have done so, and will do it again. Three-fourths of our delegation voted for this law, in the face of the fact that it would raise up against them a storm of violent and powerful opposition from all sorts of people engaged in the liquor business. It showed in them a moral courage and a regard for the duties of citizenship truly refreshing in these latter days. And again, the noble charity of our friends abroad has contributed indirectly, and to a considerable extent, to the support of these saloons. The Tribune has chronicled the fact of the drunkenness of scores who were sustained in the barracks out of this fund—both men and women. The Police have arrested such. I have known quite a number of men who spent all they earned at these saloons, leaving their families to be supported by the relief fund. I have known others who have sold articles given them from this fund for whisky. I have known drunken husbands take the clothing given to their wives and children and sell it for whisky. And what I have known has been going on all over the City—many cases having come to my knowledge through others. It was no fault of the Relief Committee, probably, but of the condition of things which is permitted to exist among us. I do not state things at random when I write, but write things whereof I know or am well assured by others.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Long-Standing Contract.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

While reading your most valuable paper on Sunday, the 25th inst., I noticed an article about the erection of a new Court-house for Queens County. I am a resident of the county, and I am glad to know that something is going to be done. The present building is a disgrace to the county, not fit for a human being to be placed within its walls. I hope the bill will be brought before the Legislature at once and acted upon without delay, so that the people of the county may have a Court-house fit to do business in. I inclose you a notice cut from the TIMES of Aug. 24, 1854, which says: "Persons having any law business in Queens County will be pleased to learn that a contract has actually been given out for the erection of a new Court-house, to be completed by the 1st of August, 1855," about seventeen years ago. By inserting this in your most valuable paper you will oblige

QUEENS COUNTY.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 5, 1872.

A Word for the Slandered Comet.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: Your remarks ridiculing the prediction of the coming comet, meet my hearty approval. But to calm the nervous and excitable, let me say a few words. We are told "the comet is heading directly for the earth." If this be true, we are going about 1,500,000 miles a day away from its direct path. From now till Aug. 13, is about 150 days—we shall then be 225,000,000 miles ahead of it—considerably more than double our distance from the sun. Again, if this is a comet whose orbit and velocity have been determined, it will undoubtedly keep the same rate of speed and orbit as before. If it be a new one, or one just discovered, its velocity and orbit, are yet unknown, making it impossible to calculate anything correctly about it. HALLEY's comet appeared after seventy years, which was predicted by him. Comets, we admit, have erratic motions, compared with the planets, but are governed by known and unalterable laws. Let the timid take courage. Yours truly

E. F. WILLIS.

The New-Haven Railroad.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The articles recently published in your valuable paper concerning the management of the New-Haven Railroad receive a most hearty indorsement from all who are compelled to travel over it. No corporation exists which shows less consideration for its patrons, or whose employes are as a general rule so wanting in even ordinary decency. The absurd regulation in New-York, which forbids one, unless provided with a ticket, to pass into the cars and see that a lady or child has a comfortable seat, is of itself most reprehensible.

But how much more when, after an investment for the necessary bit of pasteboard, and the formidable "depot guards" are passed, to find a man standing on the car platform who, unless you are bound beyond New-Haven, forbids entrance into any save miserable, cold, dirty, almost worn-out conveyances, hardly fit for use.

If ticketed, however, for any station the other side of the "Elm City," there is more respectable treatment and far better accommodations furnished. Should there be acquaintance with one named NORTHROP, (formerly from the extreme limit of Connecticut, and plain country man, but since removal to the Metropolis a Grand Mogul at Twenty-seventh-street,) who is always standing about with far more importance than the President of this road, he will direct admission for his friends to the very best place, if only going a few miles, and these pliant tools give means to open their snarly warps, and show cheerful acquiescence. The leading article in your issue of Thursday, on locking of doors when a train is in motion, only re-echoes the sentiments of many who feel a thrill of horror every time they are obliged to pass over this road, and at its conclusion, thank God for a safe deliverance. Their rates of fare have been continually advancing, and the people in the vicinity of New-York are wished the fullest measure of success in their efforts for reduction by legislative enactment; and stand far more chance of obtaining it than we can here in Connecticut, with President BENJAMIN regularly one of our General Assembly, and its members all provided with free passes, of course without any intention to influence votes.

Excuse the length of this, but rest assured a paper like the TIMES which opens its columns so freely to the redress of every wrong and maintenance of right, can never want for readers or subscribers, who can thankful it is not as some of the Press in smaller places, blind to every evil, because allowed to travel "deadhead."

THE ARCH.

Modern Jerusalem, as Well Remembered as the Old—Representations Between an Arch and Mosque.

The interest which has ever been felt by the whole Christian world in respect to the Holy City has, within the last few years, been greatly increased by the results of the ordnance survey of Palestine, under the direction of the British Government, and of the exploratory undertaken by Capt. WARREN at the expense of the "Palestine Exploration Fund." Many inquiries in regard to the location of ancient buildings in the Sacred City have been set aside by the result of these explorations, while others have been confirmed, and more important, perhaps, than all, the descriptions by JOSEPHUS of the immense height of the boundary walls of the Temple inclosure, now known as "The Noble Sanctuary," and of the great depth of the adjoining valleys, have been ascertained to be perfectly correct, though once supposed to be so grossly exaggerated as to cast doubt on the truthfulness of his entire narrative in regard to the Holy City.

A few years ago Mr. H. C. SALOUS, an artist of eminence residing in London, made a journey to Jerusalem for the express purpose of sketching it and the surrounding country, and also satisfying himself, as far as might be, of the location of the Temple and other important buildings. The result was two grand pictures, each 14 feet by 10, one giving a most elaborately-finished, and, at the same time, wonderfully accurate view of the modern city, and the other showing the ancient city when at the summit of her grandeur. In the first painting the view is taken from the hill-top above Siloam. On the right is the Mount of Olives, with its dark green trees and rocky sides; below flows the silent Kedron, and on the left are Siloam, the Valley of Jehoshaphat, or the Valley of Judgment, as the Jews sometimes call it, and the Fount of the Virgin. Immediately in front is the south-east corner of the Temple inclosure, with its massive stones, which, there is good reason to believe, have lain there undisturbed since they were first placed by the order of Solomon. Above this ancient wall rises the Mosque of Omar, or the Sekhara; of El-Aksa and the Meghrabins, and, glancing up the wall to the right, we see the Golden Gate, supposed to be the ancient gate Shushan. Further back, we observe the arch of the Ecce Homo, the ruined convent of the Knights of St. John, the residence of the Pasha and the Jews' Wailing place, and behind these the dome of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which, as is generally believed, covers Calvary and the tomb in which the body of our Lord was laid. In the background are dark hills, purpling in the fading light—for the sun is setting. In the immediate foreground is a well-drawn group of figures, representing European travelers, Arabs of the Dead Sea, Turkish officers and soldiers and inhabitants of the city.

In the second picture the city is represented as it may be supposed to have been about the year 33, when, according to the inspired writers, it was "beautiful, glorious, the joy of the whole earth." The point of view from which this picture is taken is nearly the same as that chosen for modern Jerusalem. In the foreground is a representation of Christ's entry into the city. In front is the great Temple, with its vast courts and cloisters, its marble walls and pavements blazing in the light of an Eastern sun. On the left are Herod's palace and gardens, with the towers of Hippicus, Phasculus and Marianne. Prominent among the other buildings are the immense amphitheatre erected by Herod capable of containing 30,000 spectators, where the same horrible scenes were enacted as in the Coliseum at Rome, the Palace of the Asmonean Princes, the tower of David, the great theatre and the keep of Antonia. Zion is represented as being divided from Acra by a deep valley, as it undoubtedly was in the time of Christ, though the valley is now nearly filled by the débris rolling down from the ruined city, but the valley through which the Kedron runs is not depicted as it was, but as it is. Mr. SALOUS, when he painted this picture, had not had the advantage of reading the account of Capt. WARREN's explorations, and therefore did not know that the original bed of this valley is about ninety feet below its present one, thus making the walls of the Temple inclosure to be, as JOSEPHUS describes them, "of a dizzy height above the valley." Mr. SALOUS has, however, represented the ancient city and its surroundings in exact accordance with the descriptions left by the best historical authorities, and though of course no two persons will be able to agree as to the depth of this or that valley, or the height or extent of this or that wall or tower, there can be no doubt that the design is, in the main, correct, and that a task which might have deterred any artist from attempting it, has been most satisfactorily performed.

To the artistic merits of the two pictures we have not yet referred. Mr. W. C. PRIME, author of an interesting work on Jerusalem, Rev. Dr. TYNG, and many other well-known gentlemen who have visited the city, speak of the topographical and architectural correctness of "Modern Jerusalem" in terms of the highest praise. The private houses, the gardens, the windows even, can be recognised, and as one gentleman, who has resided in the city for many years, says, "even the scenes in the Haram wall are individual pictures." In spite of this elaboration, however, a single effect has not been sacrificed. "Modern Jerusalem" is, in general treatment, color, perspective, atmosphere and drawing altogether good. Nor does the scene lack sentiment. We feel that we have before us a city over which the storms of centuries have passed, one wherein there has buried many dark secrets which we hope to get at some day, but which may perhaps never be revealed. Of "Jerusalem in her Grandeur," we can only say that it is not an exact representation of the city on which Christ looked when he uttered the prophecy, "See'st thou these great buildings? I tell you that not one stone of them shall remain upon the other," it is a grand conception of what she might have been in her palmy days, and does infinite credit to Mr. SALOUS' taste and imagination.

These two pictures, when in London, were visited by half a million of persons. They have been recently brought to this City by Mr. H. W. DERBY, and will be on exhibition at No. 161 Fifth-avenue, corner of Twenty-second-street, on and after today. They have been admirably engraved by MOTTERAM. We know not where an hour could be more profitably and pleasantly spent than in an examination of these two fine works of art, with the assistance of the keys. We are quite sure that an hour so spent will result in a more correct and vivid idea of the Holy City being obtained, than would result from the perusal of pages of description, or the inspection of hundreds of small engravings or photographs.

METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART.

Until further notice the temporary gallery of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at No. 681 Fifth-avenue, near Fifty-third-street, will be open from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., Saturdays and Mondays excepted. On Mondays the Museum will be open only during the evening. Admission, for the present, can be obtained only through a member's ticket.

PICTURE SALES.

In consequence of the retirement from business of one of the partners of the firm of GOUPIL & Co., of Paris, a large collection of works of art, belonging to the firm in this City, are offered for sale at auction. They comprise specimens by nearly all the modern French and German artists. The collection is on exhibition at the Leavitt Art Rooms, No. 817 Broadway, and the sale will take place on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday next.

A collection of foreign paintings of merit is on exhibition at the Somerville Gallery, in Fifth-avenue. They will be sold during the week.

NOTES.

The Winter exhibition of the Academy of Design closed on Saturday last. The Spring exhibition opens, we believe, early in April.

A meeting of the Brooklyn Art Association will take place at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and new Art Building this evening, at 8 o'clock.

The annual ball of the Palette Association will take place this evening at Arcade Hall.

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

Testimony and Other Documentary Evidence as to the Charges of Corruption.

The close for the present of the investigations by the Judiciary Committee of the Legislature into the charges against the corrupt judges, has loosened the tongues of certain members of the Bar Association, who do know something of the merits of the cases, and has had the same effect upon a number of the friends of the two accused judges. The Committee's labors of the past week formed the general topic of conversation last night at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, where a large number of Saturday politicians had assembled. These persons seemed to have arrived at the unanimous conclusion that so far, the charges against Judge BARNARD have completely failed, and those against CARDOZO have fared little better. They argue that these Judges have been smart enough to keep themselves out of the reach of the law. This theory seems to be generally accepted, particularly in the case of Judge BARNARD, who is universally characterized as a splendid fellow, to whom it would be a pity any harm should come. Judge CARDOZO is evidently not so popular, and it was conceded that things might go a little wrong with him.

The charges against CARDOZO, already tried, in letting loose upon society a large number of criminals, will also be brought against BARNARD, and the fact gave rise to much debate among a group of lawyers. One thought that both BARNARD and CARDOZO would creep out of closed difficulties because, instead of committing irregularities, they had acted according to the statutes in correcting illegal acts on the part of Justice DOWLING, who sentenced the criminals at Special Sessions. It is said that on this plea rest the hopes of the two Judges, as they expect to prove that every prisoner released by them was discharged by Justice DOWLING on writs of habeas corpus was illegally tried, and wrongfully imprisoned in consequence, and that their acts in liberating all the said prisoners without bonds was done on proper and legal grounds.

Whether this legal quibble will hold good remains to be seen. The publication has, however, created quite a surprise, and certain members of the Bar Association are giving special attention to it.

It was also stated last night that the Committee had adjourned for the purpose of allowing the Bar Association an opportunity to collect additional evidence against BARNARD, that already offered having been so completely upset by BARNARD's counsel. One gentleman went further than this, and stated that the Committee did not intend returning at all, and that the investigation would be allowed quietly to drop. Our reporter learned that only three members of the Committee had returned to Albany yesterday, and that the adjournment had taken place at the solicition of several of the members, who have important bills before the Legislature this week.

In conversation last night a member of the Bar Association stated that, so far from not having enough evidence to substantiate the charges against Judge BARNARD, the Committee had before them enough to convict him on each specification, and also called to mind the fact that so far only one charge has been investigated, and that the witnesses numbered nearly all connected with the Erie Ring, from whom nothing prejudicial to Judge BARNARD was expected to come. It was learned also that on the reassembling of the Committee on Friday next, the charge against Judge BARNARD of conspiring with Messrs. HOWE and HUMMEL to rob Fulton fish-market, in Fulton-ferry Island, will be investigated. For this purpose Judge DOWLING, Superintendent KELSO, Ex-Superintendent JOHN A. KENNEDY, will be examined, besides some of the criminals themselves.

BURYING THE DEAD.

Funeral Ceremonies in Different Countries and Ages.

There is, we all know, no accounting for tastes. Perhaps of all tastes, one which those who do not share it find the greatest difficulty in understanding, is that for funerals.

That there are a class of persons to whom death and its attendant obsequies have a marvelous fascination, there can be no doubt. "Tell GEORGE SELWYN," said a dying Englishwit in the last century, "that if I am alive I shall be charmed to see him, and if I'm dead he will, I know, be equally delighted to see me." SELWYN had a positive passion for everything connected with the dead. The closing years of the grandfather of the Duke of HAMILTON were principally occupied with preparations for his demise. By way of a cheerful object for his family to look upon, a costly mausoleum of black marble was raised within view of the ancestral palace. A special messenger was sent to Egypt to study the art of embalming, and the Duke took the keenest interest in learning what was to go inside him after his death. Unfortunately, the results were anything but satisfactory. The embalmer bungled, and His Grace proved so unpleasant to those immediately concerned in his entombment, that bribes and brandy had to be liberally bestowed before they would consent to go on with their work. In the seventeenth century a curious book was published by one JOHN WEEVER, on Funerals and Monuments. Its title page recounts that

"Lancashire gave him birth,
And Cambridge education,
His studies were of death,
Of Heaven his meditation."

WEEVER, who was, no doubt, a favorite author with GEORGE SELWYN, regrets the degeneracy of the age in England in respect of the pomp and ceremonies of funerals, which had been conducted with extraordinary splendor and formality in the case of the high-born. They were then carried out strictly in conformity with the ordinances of the Heralds's College. Indeed, the revenues of its officers were principally derived from these antiquated and useless ceremonies, and they must now be sadly reduced.

However, notwithstanding WEEVER's means over a degenerate age, funerals conducted in a style calculated to cheer his heart continued for a century later. In 1715 that of a millionaire citizen, one Mr. FRANCIS TRUMAN, of Hackney, was celebrated—if we may use the term—with quite exceptional grandeur.

He was carried to Goldsmith Hall, and shown there, lying in state for two days. The hall was hung with black from top to bottom, twenty-five feet high, and two or three rooms were similarly draped, and lighted with silver sconces holding immense tapers. The body was lay under a stately alcove adorned with lights, feathers, and trophies. All the company had rings, with death's heads set in crystal. Nearly twenty clergy took part in the ceremony.

The procession from the hall to the church, three miles off, began by Herbs-lane at 10 P. M. First came sixty tenants on horseback, clad in long black cloaks. Five-and-thirty coaches and six followed. The funeral cost altogether $2,000, equal to about $20,000 today. Its gorgeousness brought a smart rap from Lord SUFFOLK, the Deputy Earl Marshal, in the shape of a notice in the London Gazette condemning the mode in which the ceremonies had been conducted, the same "having far exceeded the quality of the deceased, he being only a private gentleman." His lordship proceeded to severely reprove the fashionable undertakers of the day by condemning the "licentious liberty taken of late years by ignorant pretenders to marshal and set forth the funerals of the nobility, gentry and others, (too often above their estate and quality,) the same being not only an open violation of the several established rules and orders heretofore made for the interment of all degrees, but tending to the lessening of the rights and honors of the nobility and gentry in general."

Probably the first very severe blow was given to pompous funerals by the celebrated Lord CHESTERFIELD, about a hundred years ago. In his will, peculiar in several respects, occur the words: "Satiated with the pompous follies of this life, of which I have had an uncommon share, I would have no posthumous ones displayed at my funeral, and therefore desire to be buried in the next burying-place to the place where I shall die, within five days, whole expense of my funeral to one hundred pounds."

Of late years the feeling in his country has become very strong against ostentatious obsequies. The late excellent Queen Dowager left injunctions as strict as CHESTERFIELD. Everything was to be done with the utmost simplicity, and her directions were summed up in the words "I wish to give as little trouble as possible."

In Ireland and Scotland ostentatious funerals lingered much later. Every one will remember the description in the Bride of Lammermoor of the funeral at Ravenswood Castle, which left its heir almost penniless. A similar sort of false notion of respect is the cause of long funerals north of the Tweed, while in Ireland the opportunity afforded by ceremonies for getting drunk and making a "shindy," is one too dear to the national instincts to be easily let go.

In this country, we feel convinced that we speak for the feelings of all our readers, funerals have become a positive nuisance, the persons being expected to attend who have a comparatively very slight connexion with the deceased. We cannot imagine anything really less consoling to the feelings of those who do care for the loss of those they are following to the grave, than the presence of a number of persons who are indifferent about it, for, in the hollow of carriages which frequently block up the streets of this City in pursuit of a hearse, how many are engaged in thinking of him or her who is gone? One sees the mourners—frequently not even in the appropriate trappings of woe—talking, laughing, and no doubt joking fun, as fidgetly as though they were on their way to hail or banquet. Surely it is far more in tune with these feelings which one must hope and believe inspire those nearest and dearest to the dead, that the very money should be so quiet and reticent as possible, that there should be a sense of personal bereavement felt by every person who joins in an occasion so solemn. Economy, in high places, feeling, unknown a century ago, has found favor among the wealthy, perhaps partly in the dress and window ornament, on a black ground, white tablets should be inserted to express the tears of the survivors, ludicrous as this may be, it is infinitely more pleasant to see much, he should imagine, in favor of his acquaintances hiring a carriage for a cheerful drive and chat on the death of his corpse.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

The Gospel of Christ—Sermon by Rev. William M. Taylor.

Rev. WM. M. TAYLOR, of Liverpool, recently elected minister of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, preached his first sermon there yesterday morning. The church was densely crowded. The reverend gentleman took for his text the words "According to the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to me." Arrived at the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to me, he said, he had selected the above text as furnishing him with a motto for his life and a hopeful to his future ministry in New-York, the success or failure of which no could not foretell, but his prayer was that he might receive grace to be loyal to God, and faithful to his ordination, and to preach Christ and Him crucified. In the course of his sermon the reverend gentleman then said: The greatest difficulty one meets with in teaching sinners the gospel of Christ is in showing the beauty and grandeur of it without destroying its simplicity. The gospel is sent by God to tell us that we may receive forgiveness of our sins. These are the glad tidings which are clogged with so impossible conditions and metaphysical difficulties. Nothing can at once be so grand, and yet so simple, as that God, so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die for it, that whosoever believed in him should not die, but have everlasting life. God is love, and we see the evidences of his goodness everywhere. The angels themselves never had the glory of a sinner ransomed from his misery. Other things reveal to us the wisdom, the power, the glory and the mind of God, but the Gospel reveals to us the heart of God as we see it through the sacrifice of Christ. A doctor knows no higher happiness than when after long labor and unwearying skill he rescues a poor sufferer from death, at the point of death, and God received no higher and more welcome delight than when he has brought to the foot of his throne a lowly and penitent sinner, and rescued him from the depths of his misery. God has a high and peculiar happiness in the salvation of the wicked, and yet men speak as if God was unwilling that they should be saved. This is a delusion. You cannot make God happier than by accepting the great sacrifice that he has offered to you. A special happiness dearer to him than the music of the spheres is the prayer of the publican, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Paul says that the Gospel was committed to his trust, and we as Christians, have a grave responsibility. Our duty is three-fold. We have to accept the Gospel to preserve it and to diffuse it. The heathen has stood without law, and without law shall be judged, but on us have been bestowed great privileges, and by them we shall be judged. Heard ye ever of a manacled slave refusing liberty, or a condemned criminal rejecting a reprieve? Then why should you refuse to accept freedom from sin and life everlasting which is offered to you by the Gospel of Christ. It is our duty at this day to preserve the Gospel as it was given to us, and while men are playing fast and loose with it and blurring it by a gaudy ritualism, let it be ours to hold forth the simple good faith; let us preach, not ordinances, not mere morality, but the simple beauty of God's holiness and Christ's love, who died to save sinners. We have, likewise, a duty to diffuse the gospel. Paul felt himself a trustee, as it were, of the gospel. He said, "I am a debtor to Jew and Greek." To pay that debt, he went about all his days, preaching the glad tidings and diffusing the Gospel wherever he went. We have the responsibility. We are trustees, too, and our duty is not simply to accept and preserve the gospel, but to diffuse it over all the land, to teach it to sinners and show its beauty to the poor and miserable throughout this vast world.

The Work, in Papal Countries, of Americans and Foreign Christian Union—Address by Rev. Dr. Vermilyea.

A meeting was held last evening in the Madison-avenue Baptist Church, on behalf of "The Work, in Papal Countries, of American and Foreign Christian Union." Owing to the recent inclemency of the weather, the lights in the church were only sufficient to make "darkness visible." Mr. CHITTENDEN presided in the absence of the pastor, who was detained by important engagements. The Secretary reviewed the work of the Society for some time past, and introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. VERMILYEA, of the Reformed Dutch Church, who said that he had been in Europe fifteen years ago, and no doubt since then the great changes had been effected. A great cloud, a vast storm, had swept over Europe; the recent war was a glorious triumph for Protestantism in the victory of Prussia, the standard-bearer of enlightenment and progress. The southern nations—the Latin nations—were at present in a state of agitation. A natural convulsion, the ultimate result of which would be an advancement of Rome and the overthrow of the Pope, France! Glorious smiling land of pleasure—land of the vine! How desolate and fallen is she! What will be her future condition? Italy, apparently quiet and settling down, breathing the free air of liberty so far as can be in a Romish country, concealed but a convulsion like her own volcanic. A spirit was at work in Italy from which good results might be hoped. A great tendency was shown to repudiate Rome. On crossing the Italian frontier he enveloped his Bible in the American flag. It met the respect which it deserved. American citizens traveling in Europe had, he said, gained the respect of those with whom they had come in contact. A new state of affairs had been inaugurated. The Italians were somewhat jealous of foreign influence, and were not thoroughly prepared to throw off Popery, but the effects of the "Free Church of Italy," aided by the and kindred societies, would, with God's help, accomplish their good work. The speaker gave an anecdotal of his travels in Europe, and concluded by stating that there were thirty-five churches in Italy, supported by this and other similar organizations, solicited the contributions of the faithful, and prayed that Italy—Resurgent Italy—might be made free in Christ Jesus.

Rev. Mr. BARUS spoke of the life and labors of Dr. REILLY in Mexico, after which the meeting closed with a prayer.

Anniversary of the Young Men's Benevolent Society of the Presbyterian Church—Address by Rev. William Adams.

The annual anniversary of the Young Men's Social and Benevolent Society of the Presbyterian Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Nineteenth-street, was celebrated last evening. The exercises were of an appropriate and interesting character, consisting of the singing of hymns composed for the occasion, prayers and reading of the Scriptures by Rev. S. D. ALEXANDER, D. D., and a sermon and benediction by Rev. WM. ADAMS, D. D. Mr. ADAMS in his discourse said, that there was often more real greatness in fulfilling well the commonplace duties of life, and in doing actions of secret and unnoticed benevolence, than in those brilliant achievements that attracted great public notice and applause. Life was made up of commonplaces, that word not to be looked at contemptuously because they were so. Fame was only a shadow, and they would better not neglect the substantial goods life in its pursuit. Leave, he said, to those of who enjoy the distinction of genius, the accomplishment of the things that force themselves upon the notice and public admiration of the world, and let young men, beginning in life, choose some particular plan of well doing, and do it without hope of fame. The unostentatious and unnoticed deeds of quiet benevolence, are more worthy of admiration than the noisier acts of mankind, exerted in a good cause, when done for fame and reputation. The noblest ambition, he said, for a young man, was to be a gentleman. There were many opinions as to what constituted a gentleman. The best model of a gentleman was our Savior. He was the first gentleman. He was rich and He gave up all and died to save us. In conclusion, the speaker exhorted young men to begin life with a fixed purpose of doing good to others.

Consecration of a New Catholic Church—Address by Rev. T. S. Burke.

Yesterday morning the new Dominican church at the corner of Sixty-sixth-street and Lexington-avenue, was consecrated by Archbishop MCCLOSKEY, with the usual ceremonies. In the evening a lecture was delivered to a large congregation by Rev. T. S. BURKE, O. P., on "The Mother and the Inspiration of Art." The lecturer gave an elaborate description of the Catholic Church from its infancy to the present day, and said that all the fine arts and science were first propagated by it. MICHAEL ANGELO and RAPHAEL were spoken of as some of the greatest men of their day, and as having devoted more time and money than for the advancement of the fine arts. The eternal city—Rome—he described as the wonderland in the world and the seat of science and learning. The revival of church architecture he considered was due to the Camden Church, and while he was not a friend of Protestantism advocated Christianity and the Church of Rome. The lecturer also gave a most interesting account of his recent travels in Italy and Greece.

Our Fishing Interests—Letter from Secretary Boutwell.

Secretary BOUTWELL, following reply to a letter from Dr. GEORGE B. LORING, of Massachusetts:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 5th inst. is before me. The present indications are that there will be no change in the conditions of the fishery during the coming year, and that the fishermen may make arrangements for prosecuting their business in the ordinary way.

A bill substantially like the one prepared by me in aid of the maritime interests of the country will be reported by the Committee on Commerce—omitting, however, that part which relates to the fishing interest. I am not informed as to the reason of this, except that the Committee on Commerce thought it expedient to leave that branch of the subject in the hands of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

My speech is not yet printed, but when it is I will endeavor to send you a copy.

Very truly yours,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL.

A Painful Ride for Life.

The Bangor Whig tells the story of a terrible ride which Mr. RUFUS KILGORE, a man living in Oldtown, had Tuesday evening. It seems that he was walking on the railroad track in the direction of his home when he was overtaken by a train, which was moving slowly on account of the deep snow. It was close upon him when he discovered it, and a moment's deliberation convinced him that his only course was to make a jump for the cow-catcher. This he did, but unintentional the speed of the train, and in consequence of the severity of the shock his leg was broken, and it was with great difficulty that he managed to secure a grasp. But he clung desperately, and managed to drag himself up to the pilot, hanging there during the run of a mile, right in the teeth of the wind, and covered with flying snow thrown up by the locomotive in its way through the drift. No one on the engine knew of his dangerous position, and his cries for help were drowned by the noise of the wind and roar of the train until Oldtown was reached, and he was discovered, more dead than alive. Assistance and restoratives were supplied, and the frightened and injured man will probably recover.

Buffalo Bill's Best Shot.

Although the renowned scout has left the Metropolis, where he attracted so much attention, a record of his daring deeds remains with us. This record "Buffalo Bill" gave to his friend, "Ned Buntline," who has written a story based on the adventures of the expert Western "trailer," whom Uncle Sam employs to track and watch the movements of the red-skinned foe. It is a narrative of real events, and contains the most vivid pictures of border life, its hunting sports, its trials and its dangers. We need hardly say that as "Ned Buntline" writes exclusively for the New-York Weekly, our readers must look for this entrancing story in BERGER & SMITH's widely-circulated paper. The number ready this (Monday) morning contains the beginning of Buffalo Bill's Best Shot. Of course there will be a rush for it.—Tribune.

I was Taken with a very Heavy Cold in November last, which settled on my lungs, and produced much inflammation. For a while I thought I would never get better, as the symptoms of consumption became more and more marked; and this, too, was the opinion of my friends. I was compelled to desist from all except Sabbath services. The only relief I obtained for my complaint I derived from the use of DR. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT, and so beneficially did

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

During the past week the market has been generally active, and the public sales have not only been largely attended, but the property offered has sold nearly and well. The principal sales of the week have been those of the Walter estate, held at the Exchange, on Tuesday, March 7, at which some [illegible] Park, located in the vicinity of Morningside Park, were sold by MULLEN, WILLIAMS & CO., for $[illegible], and a Supreme Court sale of fourteen lots on the Grand Boulevard and Seventieth-street held at the Exchange, on Thursday, March 7, by V. K. STEVENSON & SON, realized $[illegible]. A larger number than usual of other sections of minor importance have also been consummated with good success, so that the total value of City real estate sold for the week ending Saturday, March 9, amounts to $[illegible]. SECOND MORTGAGE 8 PER CENT. CONVERTIBLE BONDS

OF THE
Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railway,
AT 90 AND INTEREST.
From the time we first offered these Bonds they have been rapidly taken up by investors, leaving but a small amount now for sale, which, at the present price, we consider a very cheap and desirable security, as the Road is in full control of operators, and earning not more than the interest on all its Bonds. The traffic of the Road is rapidly increasing. Over one thousand miles of new roads are now building connecting with and controlled entirely by the interests of this road, all of which will be completed and in use this year.
These new roads, it is expected, will add at least fifty per cent to the net receipts of this Company.
We also buy and sell the First Mortgage Seven Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON AND WESTERN ROAD, and those of the
PEORIA AND ROCK ISLAND BAIL-WAY.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED by the undersigned, the Mayor of the City of St. Louis, at his office, City Hall, until 12 o'clock noon, of the 20th day of March proximo, for the purchase of FIVE HUNDRED ST. LOUIS CITY WATER BONDS.
Issued by authority of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, approved March 8, 1871, entitled "An act to extend and protect its Water-works," approved Feb. 3, 1872.
Said bonds are of the date of $1,000 each, to be dated April 1, 1872, having twenty years to run with interest at the rate of six per cent. payable semi-annually on the 1st day of April and October respectively, in gold coin of the United States, in the City of New-York, where the principal is also made payable in gold coin.
The net revenue derived from the Water-works is pledged by law for the redemption of the bonds now offered, both principal and interest, in the same manner as the bonds heretofore issued under the acts approved March 13, 1867, and March 26, 1870.
Bids will be received for any number of the bonds in sums of $5,000 and upward, and the proposals will be publicly opened in the office of the Mayor, on the day and time named.
The Mayor reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if in his opinion, the bids received be not satisfactory.
Proposals must be indorsed "Proposals for St. Louis Water Bonds," and addressed to the Mayor.

Bids may be made payable in the issue of the National Banks, or the currency of the United States.

OUR STREETS.

Yesterday's Rain Revealing Their True Condition.

Description of the Streets in All the Down-Town Wards—Dirt, Garbage and Ice Found Everywhere—Necessity for Speedy Action by the Improvement

Two light rains which began to fall on Saturday night in this City grew heavier after midnight, and the streets were deluged all day yesterday. Owing to the cleaning and neglected condition of the different streets in the lower portion of the City, they became yesterday very sloppy indeed. Great masses of ice and filth, accumulated during the recent cold weather, presented almost insurmountable obstacles to the passage of the water which collected in the gutters, thereby adding much to the wretched condition of these thoroughfares. The rain thoroughly washed every hamper of garbage, and exposed their contents in hideous detail, giving the passer-by a clear idea of the extent of the street-contractor's contract in not removing the filth. Should the present thaw continue for many days, the result will be terrible, both in a sanitary and pecuniary point of view. The festering masses of garbage, hitherto innocuous in the grasp of ice that covered and permeated them, will then throw off all their pestilent odors and vapors, thereby adding to the mortality of the City, and laying the foundation for a pestilence during the coming Summer. As it is, the accumulated ice and snow that now blocks up the gutters and culverts, keeps the water from disappearing as it should, and prevents the passage of much noisome matter. The condition of the City below Bleecker-street is almost shocking one, as will be seen by the descriptions of our reporters, who have made a comprehensive survey of that entire region.

THE FIRST WARD.

The condition of the streets in this Ward is almost indescribable. No description certainly could convey anything like an accurate idea of their filthy state. Commencing at State-street opposite the Battery Park, where cleanliness would be expected, if anywhere, huge piles of ashes and garbage line the sidewalk. Greenwich-street, from State to Liberty, has a solid bank of ashes from two to five feet high the entire distance on either side, and extending to the very edge of the railroad track. Washington-street is still worse, and the mounds of accumulated filth of all kinds mount higher. On both of these thoroughfares piles of congealed snow and ice vary the ash and garbage monotony. But bad as both these streets are, that portion of those that intersect them and lying between them and the North River are still more filthy; some of them, in fact, such as Carlisle and Rector, being almost impassable for vehicles. These two last-named streets are narrow, and the denizens there, with a view no doubt to keep the side-walk clean, have piled their ashes in the middle of the street. The eastern side of West-street is in a condition to dispute any of their claims to dirty supremacy. Beef-cellars' saloons abound, and sawdust appears to be in good demand. Piles of this stuff mingle with other piles of ashes, and for many blocks grace the curbstone to the height of three or four feet. Immense heaps of oyster shells are also numerous. All through this Ward ash-boxes and barrels are entirely dispensed with, and the refuse of the stoves is scattered around promiscuously. As for the street proper, it is safe to say they have had no official visit from a scavenger for many months.

THE SECOND WARD.

The important character of the business transacted in this quarter, and the many influential gentlemen engaged in its transaction, induces it a sort of immunity from the general dirt with which most other districts overflow. And yet even here the streets are anything but clean. Excepting Wall, Broad and one or two other thoroughfares, the same slovenliness, though to a less degree, is apparent. On Beekman, Fulton, John and Maiden-lane the sidewalks are crowded with dry goods boxes and barrels of ashes all piled up and run over. A Police officer on duty in Maiden-lane said yesterday that the contractor paid for removing this ashes daily had not been around for five weeks, and that that is about the usual time that elapses between his visits. Water and Front-streets are little better than Greenwich or Washington. In Front-street, near Broadway, there is a pile of filth about five feet high and extending several yards, which, judging from its appearance, must have laid there for several months.

THE THIRD WARD.

Between Reade-street and Liberty and Broadway and the Hudson River, the boundaries of the Third Ward, so great is the accumulation of filth in the streets that one would imagine that the scavengers had entirely overlooked this section of the City for years past. Liberty and Dey streets, from Broadway to the river, are extensively covered with filth; the gutters are entirely closed with dirt, and the muddy water runs in choked rivulets in the streets and on the sidewalks. Church-street, up to Fulton, still impaved, is filled with high mounds of dirt and refuse. Dozens of garbage barrels, interbedded in filth, line both sides of Dey-street. In Greenwich, between Liberty and Dey, are huge mounds of garbage, and two immense boxes, overflow with the disgusting stuff, which is trailed into the hallways of the adjoining houses. The smooth wooden pavement of Dey-street, between Washington and the river, is completely hidden by the layer of filth upon it, and in the centre of the street, a ridge of hard-baked filth extends the whole length of the block. The approaches to Washington Market are in their usual filthy condition. In West-street, near Fulton, a huge heap of dirt, shaped like a promontory, juts out from the sidewalk into a river of liquid nastiness in the street, and great piles of oyster-shells, garnished with dead animals, decayed vegetable and stinking offal can be seen in front of the Market-house. Vesey-street, its entire length, is indescribably filthy, and Barclay-street but little better. Much of this Ward is dirty enough to breed a pestilence and Park-place is in a very bad condition, being necessarily cumbered with dirt thrown out from the foundations of houses in process of erection.

THE FOURTH WARD.

This Ward commences at Catharine-street and runs down to the river. It goes along the river to Peck Slip; thence 16 turns westward and comes up by way of Perry and Spruce streets, thence east it runs along the east side of Chatham-street to Catharine.

This district is by no means so dirty as the last. As a general rule the streets that go down to the river have a natural drainage which keeps them clean. But some attention has been paid to the paving and to the cleansing also, and they compare not unfavorably with other streets down-town. Some are, however, some exceptions. Spruce-street, running from Nassau-street to Gold-street is, it must be confessed in a shameful condition. Opposite WARREN & CO.'S extensive manufactory there is a huge heap of ashes and refuse substances that is perfectly disgusting. Also on the other side in front of No. 16, are large heaps of ashes, waste paper and rags, all these right in the gutter and impeding the passage of water to the culvert. In front of the Tract Society building are also heaps of refuse, which have the same bad effect. Ferry-street is a short street quite free from any heaps, but the pavement is choked in many places with frozen snow, and the sidewalks are thick with ice. This is a very narrow street. Water-street is in a very bad condition. The worst block is probably between James-slip and Oliver-street, where there are heaps of ashes, refuse and snow combined; daily throw out high. The ice on the sidewalk is a foot thick, and the rain-water from the gutter-pipes of the houses plashes into it, making deep furrows, but unable to find any outlet. So it all comes back again. Also, between Dover-street and Peck-slip this street is frightfully blocked up, especially opposite to the United States Hotel, and near house No. 270. There are cart-loads and masses of rotting substances throughout the entire extent of the block. Oliver-street, with the exception of some large oyster-heaps, is fairly clean. The same may also be said of Cherry-street, which is covered with snow. On the block between and below Market are heaps of ashes and vegetable substances right in the gutter, but as there is a decided fall to the street, the water drains off in the centre. Oak-street, from end to end, is in a filthy condition. There are ash-barrels and boxes in front of the houses on both sides, but it crowns in the middle, and the gutters are stopped, and there is no drainage. Pearl-street is very short—

THE FIFTH WARD.

Crosby Street—Across the Fifth Ward is exceedingly dirty and filthy. Crosby, in Chatham-street, and from Broadway to the river, a vacant space of ground is filled with fly-ground leaves so through it might be a receptacle for the refuse of a large town, the dirt consists of boxes thrown out days by the length of the block, from Grand to Walker-street in the street. Hammond-alley, only a narrow lane, was filled yesterday with dirty-looking and mud-splashed urchins, dripping in the rain and playing among the wet scraps. Green-alley, near North Moore, is empty, disgusting, and a huge pile of garbage composed of rotten vegetables, fowl, fish, decomposed by the rain, and trickling over the sidewalk and into the street, yesterday presented a most sickening appearance. Hubert-street, from Washington to the river, has ridges of dirty-looking stuff on both sides, at least three feet in height. As a rule of Leight-street, there is a City Pump. Upon the platform and in some there are tons upon tons of garbage and refuse which, from its appearance, has laid there accumulated for a great length of time, to poison the pure air from the river. Both sides of Laight-street, in the lower block are covered with garbage and rotten ice two feet high. The Sewers on one side of the street are occupied by poor people, who are being slowly poisoned by the exhalations from the vast accumulations of filth in the neighborhood, and so it is all over the Ward, though as part of it so wretchedly bad as here. Fourteen large mounds of rotten filth, with vegetable in Canal-street, from Byrne-street Market to Hudson-street, three short blocks. Waite-street, where it debouches into Canal, is as thickly covered with dirt heaps as some of the vacant up-town lots, where the City dirt is carted. Franklin also fill the street and are run up on both sides of Franklin-street, and at the Fifth, Pike, after pile of filthy garbage was met with in Leonard-street and West Broadway. In Thomas-street, there are four or five tenement-houses. Close to the doors of each, on the narrow sidewalk and filling the gutters, there are large piles of stinking refuse and offal, sending forth disturbing odors to be breathed by the wretched inmates. Unhealthy-looking children squat in the dirt on the sidewalk, and are passed day after day by business men without perhaps a thought of their unhappy fate. Duane, Reade and Warren streets have their pavements rendered unvisible with filth, and only Broadway had any pretensions to cleanliness.

THE SIXTH WARD.

This is perhaps the most neglected quarter of the City. Includes all those streets bounded by Broadway on the eastern side from the City Hall Park to Canal-street, by Canal-street from that point to the Bowery, and from thence to the City Hall Park. The first noticeably dirty street ranging from Canal is Bayard, which is encumbered with immense heaps of general filth, from Mr. Berry's stable down to its junction with Baxter-street. The street is dotted on both sides with heaps at irregular distances of ashes, vegetable refuse, rags, old boots, old crinolines, &c., compacted into a firm mass by frozen snow. The rain-water drains off through the middle of the street, and the sidewalks are overflowed from the thawing of the masses in the gutter. At the junction with Baxter-street it is impossible to cross from the immense quantity of half-frozen ice and snow. One culvert is completely useless. The other is free.

Mott-street crosses Bayard one block from the Bowery. It is blockaded in the same fashion, with piles of ashes and refuse substances. There is however one perfectly clean block between Pell and Park streets. Mulberry is the next cross street, and is in the same condition. Almost every culvert in this street is blocked. The centre of one block was filled with rotten onions, which had been ejected from some store. Baxter-street comes next. It is in a deplorable condition. The accumulated ice and snow raised up by the heaps of ordure and filth, which occupy the pavement, are now above the level of the sidewalks, and the rain water pours steadily down the miserable basements.

Leonard may be considered the last of the dirty streets in this populous locality. It is loaded, between Baxter and Centre, not only with filthy heaps of refuse, but it seems to be unpaved, and the filth is mixed up with masses of ice, cobble-stones and heaps of sand. It is almost impassable. On the other side of Centre it is pretty clean, though there are some heaps of ashes and potato-parings opposite the Tombs. Franklin-street, on the other side of the Tombs, is also pretty clean; in front, however, of the store of KOTTKEL HAGENS, who supplies peddlers, there is quite a large heap. In another quarter of the Ward is Worth-street, running direct from Chatham-square to Broadway. The eastern end of Worth is completely unpaved, uncurbed, unculverted. At the corner of the first block some one is erecting a large iron building, and the heaps of sand used for this have become foundations for masses of frozen snow now melting. The culverts are both closed. Further on, Worth-street presents an unbroken series of filth-heaps, compounded principally of ashes and potatoes in a rotten condition, until it reaches the Five Points Mission, where it is greatly improved. Pearl-street, which is clean from Broadway to Elm, is full of dirt-heaps from Elm to Chatham; but the culverts are free, and the sidewalks tolerably decent. City Hall-place, which only consists of two blocks, is in the same condition; the sidewalks being in the same condition, the side-walks being free, but the gutters obstructed by heaps of ashes and vegetable refuse.

THE SEVENTH WARD.

If the Seventh Ward was to be taken as an index of the character of the City for cleanliness and good order, a stranger would form an extremely low opinion of the efficiency of our sanitary measures. When the Seventh Ward was recently in the political scale—the nursery of the most inferior and least respectable of political jugglers—it is now in the scale of cleanliness, being, perhaps, the worst in the entire City. This statement is undoubtedly sweeping, but any investigation of the subject can hardly fail to realise its truth. The Ward is large and contains a number of streets originally elegant in construction, broad and well-ventilated, yet even these have fallen into a condition of disorder and irregularity proportionate to the more filthy but less pretentious streets. East Broadway, near Rutgers-square, Division-street and Madison-street, which runs almost to the East River, afford in themselves ample evidence of the force of the assertion. East Broadway and Madison-street, at one period in the history of New-York, contained the residences of the élite of the City, but the up-town movement gradually deprived them of their character in this respect, and the commodious dwellings of the wealthy were quickly transformed into cheap and overcrowded boarding-houses. As a result the streets in time lost their cleanly appearance; ash-barrels and refuse were flung into the streets, and no attempt being made to remove them, the nuisance accumulated so that at present the footpaths and gutters are literally covered with this species of defilement. The snow of the past Winter was of course crowded on these heaps, and hardening with time now present a surface impenetrable to everything, but a pick-axe. In all the other sections of the Ward the system of heaping up refuse in this manner is carried to a greater extent in proportion to the density of the population. In Monroe, Catharine, South and Cherry, there is a very apparent descent in the grade and character of the streets, and every conceivable description of nuisance shock of positive filth is flung into the faces of the pedestrians. There is no attempt made to mitigate the evil, and hundreds of old broken trucks, barrels, timbers of all description, and rubbish from torn-down houses only serve to heighten the appearance of the nuisance. Indeed, everything bearing on cleanliness. In this category Jacob, Oliver, Market, Clinton, Pike, Rutger, and the other cross streets might be included, each growing more wretched in its aspect toward the river. In the by-streets and alleys that abound in this district a still more disagreeable picture presents itself. Here the principle of crowding the largest number of inhabitants into the least possible space, is reduced to a fine art, so that within an exceedingly limited area an astonishing number of human beings are huddled together with scarcely any regard to decency and morality. It is not necessary to enter these domiciles and reveal the wretchedness of their condition; it is fully exemplified in the streets. They present a most unhappy aspect, a proper description of which cannot be given. The heavy rain that fell during the forenoon of yesterday served to increase the prevailing gloom and bring to mind a consciousness of the great danger to the public health that exists here. The evil is evident, but where is the intention manifest to abate it? There is none, and now that warm weather is approaching, it is daily increasing.

THE EIGHTH WARD.

The condition of this ward is not any better than those below Canal-street. Passing up Sullivan-street the writer encountered huge piles of ice and garbage at almost every step. Pools of water had formed in several places to such an extent, in some instances that the water covered the sidewalks to the depth of over two inches. Here and there the inmates of the houses adjacent were busily engaged in diverting the channels of these streams streams in order to accomplish transfusion in their cellar houses. From Canal-street up as far as Spring nearly all the residents of this street are colored people, who are huddled together in a perfect labyrinth of wretched tenements. The consequence is that having no proper outlet for their refuse the street is full of filth, the gutters are choked with ashes and every block is garnished with one or two moveable receptacles, which mark the location of an ash box, long since buried under the accumulated refuse of a dozen tenements. Thompson-street presents a similar appearance as far up as Houston, and the wretched condition of the street is increased, as in the case with Sullivan, by the presence of the Sarah-avenue Railroad depot, which has been kept clean by throwing the ice and snow to either side. Mercer-street is not so bad, though it is by no means clean. Greene and Wooster streets, have been decidedly neighborhoods, and having radiocals trucks in them, are dreadfully dirty. All of the cross streets are in a similar condition; and if the concerted progress is not [illegible]

THE NINTH WARD.

Fourth to Cooper-street, from Bowery to Bleecker, the city exemplifies the same novelty, the accumulation of dirt heaps, overflowing sidewalks and gutters, and the former street choked with garbage or fish of late. The sewers are remarkably clean, apparently, compared with the rest of the tenements. In no case were the culverts sufficiently clear to permit a ready passage for the water, and in two or two points pedestrians were compelled to wade through pools in their efforts to cross the street. Elm-street is in a similar state, being even more dirty. Lower Elm, in fact, is worse than in Mulberry-street. But in Mulberry, Elizabeth and Mott streets the acme of dirt now seemed to be reached, for in these streets the refuse no longer lay in heaps, but were continuous mounds of unhealthy stuff, the contents being clearly revealed by the action of the rain storm. All through this neighborhood an immense beneficial population reside, and should the thaw continue, and no efforts be made to cleanse the street, the Health Board will undoubtedly find its sanitary measures strangely altered for the worse. Accompanied in such a state of affairs, the opinions of the Health Board should not be heed the danger by which their care surrounded, and the dirty dens usually revel in dirt and uncleanliness.

These rapid sketches of the various down-town wards afford a painful commentary of the criminal neglect of the Street-cleaning Department, and the necessity for the most energetic efforts to secure a system of official action to remedy the existing condition of these streets. Prompt, early organized effort, speedily put in force, would do much to remove the danger from our midst. Let the gutters and culverts be thoroughly cleaned, and should the thaw continue, some improvement may be achieved. Unless this is done at once, the predictions of an unhealthy Summer in New-York, so often made during the Winter, will be more than verified.

WALTER ROCHE.

History of His Swindles on the Bowling-Green Bank—What is Charged Against Him—A Sketched Case for the Grand Jury.

Of the men who, by their dishonesty, caused the suspension of the Bowling-green Savings Bank, and all the subsequent trouble to depositors, it is believed now that WALTER ROCHE is equally responsible with HANK SMITH for the failure of that ill-starred institution. By the force of public opinion, and the threats of the angry depositors, HANK SMITH has consented, or rather promised, to refund $60,000 of their stolen savings, and REEVES E. SELMES has been brought to a state of partial penitence. WALTER ROCHE, the head and front of the Bowling-green Savings Bank, and possibly the only man who has been enriched by its existence, has not yet surrendered one dollar of his plunder. He snaps his fingers at the civil suits brought against him, and apparently relies public opinion by permitting his name to be published as one of the promoters and commissioners of a street-lengthening job which, of course, calls for the outlay of vast sums of the people's money.

The downward progress of the Bowling-green Bank, already given in the TIMES from day to day, have afforded the public a general idea of the frauds practiced by the three managers, and from them it might be assumed that they are all equally guilty, but it is now beyond question that the dunges of SMITH and SELMES are completely eclipsed by those of ROCHE. He, unlike the others, was not content with robbing the depositors alone, but also endeavored to gobble up SELMES' share, which he was about restoring to the bank. Shortly after the suspension SELMES promised to give to the bank a conveyance of his real estate, valued by himself at $160,000, but which was really worth about $80,000. In the meantime ROCHE, by dint of entreaties and threats, forced SELMES to give over to him, personally, a mortgage for $30,000 on this same property, under the pretext that he would provide for the depositors, and REEVES save SELMES from public reproach. This mortgage ROCHE deposited in the Guardian Savings Bank, of which he was Vice-President, for the avowed purpose of securing the depositors of that institution. SELMES subsequently assigned to ROCHE the whole of his real and personal property, in the shape of a note for $80,000; so that when SELMES, upon compulsion, redeemed his promise of transferring his "real estate" for the benefit of the depositors, he had in reality nothing to transfer. ROCHE having already appropriated the whole of it. The Depositors' Committee and their counsel, Mr. DEVELIN, forced ROCHE to surrender SELMES' note of $80,000, which was destroyed, and the conveyance of real estate made by SELMES thus fortunately remains good to the bank. The mortgage of $30,000 ROCHE still clings to, thereby defrauding the bank of that sum.

It is the unanimous opinion of those gentlemen who have investigated the concerns of the bank, that ROCHE was always the prime mover in the swindles which led to the suspension of the bank. In his capacity as Vice-President of the Guardian and the Bowling-green Banks, he was enabled to do an extensive business in what is technically known as "shaving" notes. HANK SMITH and SELMES acquiesced in these arrangements beyond doubt, but ROCHE is shown to have been always the master-mind that concocted them. Among the largest depositors in the Guardian Savings Bank are found the names of GRATZ NATHAN, JAS. H. COLEMAN, MATTHEW, T. BRENNAN, the Sisters of Charity, (who upon ROCHE's inducements deposited $92,000,) and HENRY MCCARDEN, a real estate broker and partner of ROCHE. All these invested large sums at ROCHE's suggestion, and it was to save his credits with them, and secure himself from exposure, that he conveyed $400,000 of his own property and $80,000 of SELMES' property to this Bank. When this conveyance was made, as ROCHE well knew, the trustees of the Guardian Bank had already contributed $80,000 to pay off the depositors, which was more than enough to cover the actual deficit, so the conveyance was made actually to defraud the creditors of the Bowling-green Bank.

It has been stated by a number of the depositors of both banks that during a time of necessity they applied to ROCHE, in his capacity of Vice-President, for loans upon perfectly sound real estate. These were invariably refused, though at the same time it was well known that ROCHE was, in conjunction with a Broadway bank, lending out the money of depositors upon worthless paper, on which he was charging from ten to twenty-five per cent. per month. ROCHE's transactions with the Avenue C Railroad Company have already been alluded to in these columns, and it is only now necessary to say that the Railroad Company still refuses to pay the large loan they received from the Bowling-green Bank, on the ground that ROCHE had appropriated to his own use a large amount of their bonds. The large sums which have been borrowed from the Guardian Bank by the Bowling-green Bank were always (as the books and documents show) at the suggestion of ROCHE, though with the full approval of SMITH and SELMES, and they were made to meet some pressing emergency in ROCHE's note-shaving and Wall-street speculations.

Thus it will be seen that without at all detracting from SMITH's and SELMES' complicity, ROCHE has been the prime mover in the numerous frauds which have made bankrupts of depositors in the Bowling-green Bank. Upon the representations of SMITH, ROCHE and SELMES, deposited their hard-earned savings. That ROCHE is well able to pay to the depositors all he has stolen from them is beyond doubt. Monkery of the Description Committee claim that he is worth nearly $1,000,000. Certain it is that he is a wealthy man. He has already deposited $400,000 worth of property with the Guardian Bank, and is known to have been enriched by his marriage to the extent of $200,000. As a proof of the hypocrisy of the man it is only necessary to mention that he has been long well known in religious circles, and since his recent "troubles" has induced many clergymen and others to intercede with the Investigating Committee on his behalf. ROCHE pretends indifference to the civil suits against him. The warrants already put into effect, and those now held over his head, have had, apparently, no effect upon him other than make him affirm that he is an injured man, and the public will doubtless hear with pleasure that the services of the Grand Jury will next week be evoked in his behalf on the charge of robbing the poor, the aged, the widow and the orphan.

Juvenile Thieves.

FOUR boys, JEREMIAH NORMAN, JOHN TUOHMY, JOHN ADAMS and THOMAS CUNNOR, the youngest of whom is ten and the oldest fourteen years old, were yesterday arrested in Newark, charged with grand larceny. They were found at the Morris and Essex depot spending considerable money, and on being searched $90 18 were found upon them. THOMAS MALONE, a mason, charged JOHN ADAMS, the youngest of the party, with having stolen $141 from his coat, which was hanging in the building at No. 115 Sheffield-street, upon which he was at work. The lad confessed the theft.

THE OIL WAR.

Meeting of the Petroleum Refiners—Election of Officers—A Committee to Visit the Oil Regions—Interesting Facts.

An adjourned meeting of the Petroleum Refiners and Dealers, of this City, was held on Saturday afternoon, at the office of Messrs. JOSIAH MACY'S SONS. The Committee on Permanent Organization, appointed at the previous meeting, presented articles of association which were adopted, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, HENRY H. ROGERS; Vice-President, JACOB GOLDSMITH; Secretary and Treasurer, J. H. WICKES; Executive Committee, JOSIAH MACY, Jr., HENRY C. OHLIN, J. C. MCKAY. Reports were received from the Committees delegated to confer with the Southern Improvement Company and the oil producers. The Southern Improvement Company, although expressing a desire to co-operate with the Association, offered nothing in tangible shape for action. The oil producers made positive offers of protection in regard to supplies of oil and transportation. A committee, consisting of the President and Messrs. Day, Goldsmith, Brown and Fleming, was then appointed to visit the oil regions and personally confer with the oil producers. On motion, it was agreed to hold an open meeting at the Merchants' Exchange, in Pine-street, this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and to the same invite attendance of the exporters and all others interested in the business, for a general interchange of views, that the Committee delegated to visit the oil regions might know and be able to express the sentiment of the whole trade on the impending struggle.

At the close of the meeting on Saturday, gentlemen representing the Southern Improvement Company were in consultation with the refiners, and, with a view of saving time and avoiding the petified ideas of the Company, it was suggested that the Company present in writing a proposal for consolidation. This was declined, but the refiners individually were invited to meet the representatives of the Company today, when proposals governed by the circumstances of each refiner's business would be made.

In the opinion of an active member of the trade, the result of the existing war depends much upon the action of New-York. If companies and dealers conclude it to be to their interest to put their business into the hands of the Southern Improvement Company, it will materially strengthen the Company's position, inasmuch as it would place in their hands a refining capacity of about two-fifths of the production. If, on the other hand, New-York forms an alliance with the oil regions, the combination so formed would be abundantly able to refine all the oil that is produced, store and handle it in the market prior to foreign shipment, and discourage oil producers from placing themselves to the mercy of the Southern Improvement Company, that corporation would be, Othello-like, without an occupation.

The prevalent impression that oil cannot be transported by any other means than at the pleasure of oil Company is an erroneous one. Railroads are in duty bound to carry all freight that offers unless the cars of a freight nature are engaged. The laws of this State no doubt need some amending, and the Legislature will be asked to make an investigation in this particular instance, with the object of expunging the portion complained, as well as past violations of the law.

The City of Buffalo appreciating the condition of affairs, and alive to the benefits to be derived from a railroad connection with the oil regions, has voted an appropriation of $1,000,000, and appointed a committee of fifty, headed by the Mayor, to visit the oil regions and take active steps for a commencement of the work. A public meeting of citizens for a like object has been called, the Prospects are that the City will be [illegible] with the Oil Regions, and the prospect for its early completion is good. It is to be hoped that the Legislature will grant an extension of the charter of the Erie Canal for about eight months of the year. Parties in the interest of the Midland Railroad have offered to build that road if Congress will grant a free way through the public lands, and agree to deliver oil in New-York over the new road before canal navigation closes the coming season.

The fight, in any the least, is a lively one, and as to the results it is hard to conjecture, but the meeting of this afternoon will probably shadow the end.
